Buffel lobby

TRADITIONAL Owners, including representatives from the Red Centre, travelled to Canberra last week to lobby politicians to officially recognise buffel grass as a significant weed.

The delegation met with Senator David Pocock and Senator Sarah Hanson-Young, calling on the Australian Government to take immediate action on buffel grass and to recognise it as a Weed of National Significance (WONS).

A federal decision on the nomination is expected later this month.

The delegation emphasised the importance of the WONS nomination as the government announced a 12-month delay to the Key Threatening Process assessment for buffel grass.

IMMEDIATE financial aid and accommodation assistance are available for flood-affected Central Australian residents under the Disaster Recovery Funding Arrangements.

Local governments in affected areas will also receive support to carry out counter-disaster operations and restore essential public assets, including debris removal, emergency works and infrastructure repairs.

Alice Springs Mayor Asta Hill said extreme weather over the past month could have a significant impact on households.

LIVING Waters Lutheran School principal Lisa Goldsworthy will not be footy tipping alone this season, enlisting two teams of students who will bring different strengths to the predictions.

In The Centralian Today's own Footy Tipping Competition, Living Waters has spiced up its campaign with a mix of football fanatics and number geniuses.

With two teams - Footy on the Fly and Maths on the Full - Mrs Goldsworthy will meet with the groups each week during Maths Enrichment time, where both will present their carefully considered tips.

Footy on the Fly brings deep knowledge of players and clubs, reading momentum swings, predicting upsets and analysing team vibes.

Maths on the Full, meanwhile, focuses on patterns, probability and statistics.

Mrs Goldsworthy said the students would then present their arguments to her, which she would review before blending the data and arguments with her own instinct, experience (and a little bit of personal bias) to submit the final tips to The Centralian Today.

Mrs Goldsworthy and the two student teams will also compete in a mini in-school tipping competition.

"Our students are clever, competitive and full of enthusiasm. I'm not sure if passion or maths will win... but I'm hoping a mix of both might just give me the edge."

Blak queer stars shine at fabALICE

By Gladys Barreta

THE 2026 fabALICE festival will showcase a powerful First Nations lineup, highlighting a commitment to glitter, culture and celebrating self-expression across all colours of the rainbow.

The event, running from 26-29 March in Alice Springs, will feature a cast of First Nations performers leading a program that celebrates Blak queer joy.

Headlining the lineup is Miss Ellaneous, the iconic drag persona of Ben Graetz and one of Australia's most influential Blak queer creative leaders.

A co-founder of fabALICE and founder of the national drag pageant Miss First Nation, Miss Ellaneous has spent more than two decades championing First Nations LGBTQIA+SB performers and creating platforms for their voices.

Joining her is Miss First Nation 2025 winner and Wiradjuri/Kamilaroi queen Kitty Obsidian whose bold, unapologetically political drag and activism have captivated audiences nationally and feature in a new SBS documentary.

BLAK-EXCELLENCE: Gurindji artist, Constantina Bush will bring bold storytelling and unapologetic Blak humour to fabALICE 2026.

Also performing is Wiradjuri queenm Oxy-Kodeine who was the First Runner-Up and People's Choice winner at Miss First Nation 2025, representing the next generation of Blak drag excellence.

The lineup also includes Naarm-based performance and Yorta Yorta/Gumbaynggirr duo, The Huxleys, with Garrett Huxley, whose glitter-soaked performances centre queer and Blak joy, lineage and resilience.

Arrernte Sistergirl and non-binary artist, Stone Motherless Cold will bring boundary-pushing performances blending techno, house and Indigenous futurism with First Nations storytelling.

Also appearing is Tiwi Island Sistagirl and legendary Aboriginal drag performer Crystal Love Johnson, alongside Helpmann Award-nominated cabaret star Constantina Bush (Gurindji), whose performances mix camp, comedy and cultural insight.

DANISH royals Frederik and Mary visited Uluru on Saturday 14 March, in their first trip to Australia since taking the throne.

The normally arid Red Centre was a sea of green after weeks of heavy rain soaked the region, sending waterfalls cascading down the famous rock.

The monarchs made their way into the cultural centre under grey skies for a guided tour during which they learned about the creation of the land and Anangu customs.

They watched a ceremonial dance called Inma, which connects A?angu people to their ancestors through song and dance.

Frederik and Mary also admired the sunset with Indigenous elders, in a stop that drew comparisons with the 1983 British royal tour, when the late Princess Diana and then Prince Charles, now King, visited.

Their majesties also travelled to a nearby waterhole, which is one of the few permanent water sources around Uluru, for sunrise on Sunday.

The royal visit isn't all about sightseeing and photo opportunities, however.

Their delegation, representing more than 50 Danish companies, also visited to do business with a focus on clean energy.

The six-day state tour, which included visits to Canberra, Melbourne and Hobart, aimed to deepen trade ties between Queen Mary's adopted and home countries.

Denmark's deputy prime minister, as well as ministers for foreign affairs and climate, accompanied the monarchs.

"Denmark and Australia share an interest in nature and cultural conservation and elements related to nature and culture will form part of the state visit," a statement from the Royal House of Denmark said.

The pair also met Governor-General Sam Mostyn, Prime Minister Anthony Albanese and his wife Jodie Haydon.

Frederik and Mary were proclaimed Denmark's ruling monarchs in a ceremony in January 2024.

The event marked their 20th year of marriage.

Police renew warning over fake cash

By Phil Williams

NORTHERN Territory Police have issued another warning for Territorians to be on the look out for fake cash.

Police are advising retailers and the public to watch for counterfeit $50 and $100 notes following the seizures of more than $20,000 in fake currency since September last year.

The recent seizures follow an increase in attempted importation, possession, and use of counterfeit notes at businesses across the Northern Territory.

Police say the counterfeit notes, while of "reasonable quality," can be identified by the word "COPY" printed in small text on one side.

In addition, the texture of the notes is paper based, unlike the legal tender notes which are made of polymer.

Detective Senior Sergeant Corey Borton said in an attempt to avoid detection, the fake cash is often used for making small purchases .

"Individuals using these notes often make small purchases and pass them as legitimate currency or conceal them among genuine notes during larger transactions, he said.

"Northern Territory Police urge all retailers to stay alert. If you think a note is fake and it is safe to do so, do not accept it.

Since late 2025, there have been numerous incidents of fake cash being discovered in circulation across the country including Alice Springs.

On September 30, local police located and seized almost $5000 of counterfeit notes in $100 and $50 denominations, with another $600 surrendered to police.

The seizure followed similar incidents in South Australia during August and September, where there were more than 200 reported cases.

At the time, police said the illegal notes had been tendered at various Alice Springs businesses and licensed venues.

Investigations into the origin of the current spate of counterfeit notes remain ongoing, with NT Police not willing to speculate on potential links to activity outside the Territory.

"Police recommend that if you believe you have received counterfeit money, put it in an envelope, record how it came into your possession, and call police on 131 444, Detective Senior Sergeant Borton said.

"Alternatively, if you know someone in possession of counterfeit currency, you can make an anonymous report to police via Crime Stoppers on 1800 333 000."

Offences relating to the making, importing, buying, selling, possessing, or using counterfeit Australian currency are indictable offences under the Crimes (Currency) Act 1981 and carry maximum penalties of up to 14 years imprisonment.

More information on detecting counterfeit money is available on the Reserve Bank of Australia website at banknotes.rba.gov.au

Drink edict

By Phil Williams

THE governing body of a remote community has told its residents to stop drinking and gambling there.

Instead, the Mutitjulu Community Aboriginal Corporation has told its residents to 'go drink in Alice'.

In an attempt to address the problem, MCAC members are planning on speaking with management at Voyages who operate the resort, which sells alcohol at Yulara, and will ask to have anyone found selling alcohol to Mutitjulu residents removed.

The direction to drink in Alice Springs came just two days before the Royal Visit of King Frederik and Queen Mary of Denmark, who began their Australian tour on Anangu Country on Saturday, 14 March

Mutitjulu is a closed and dry community at the base of Ayers Rock whose residents are Pitjantjatjara and Yankunytjatjara, with ties to Ngaanyatjarra people.

In notes from the12 March community meeting and, posted to its Facebook page, the corporation told its members they should go to Alice Springs if they wanted to consume alcohol..

"Stop bringing Grog, Gunja and Gambling (sic) into community," the note said. "If you want to drink, go drink in Alice, we are a dry community. "MCAC will talk to Voyages and have anyone selling to community sent away," the note concluded.

Buffel grass national issue

By Gladys Barreta

TRADITIONAL Owners flagged the urgency for national management and recognition of buffel grass as a significant weed in Canberra last week.

On 12 March, a delegation met with Senator David Pocock and Senator Sarah Hanson-Young, calling on the Australian Government to take immediate national action on buffel grass and to recognise it as a Weed of National Significance (WONS).

A federal decision on the nomination is expected later this month.

The delegation emphasised the importance of the WONS nomination as the government announced a 12-month delay to the Key Threatening Process assessment for buffel grass, which was first submitted in 2024.

Buffel grass is known to fuel hotter, bigger, and more frequent fires, putting communities at risk, destroying landscapes, and outcompeting native species.

Eastern Arrernte Traditional Owner Camille Dobson spoke about the cultural and health impacts at a press conference.

"Buffel grass and the fires it causes affect Aboriginal people's health, from chronic illness and allergies to grief from loss of Country," she said.

"We discussed policies, management strategies, and the importance of declaring buffel as a weed of national significance."

Ms Dobson stressed the need to educate policymakers, many of whom live in Canberra and are less affected by buffel grass.

In Ltyentye Apurte (Santa Teresa), five culturally significant springs linked to the Rainmaker story are infested, with only two currently managed.

"We have a responsibility under our law to care for these places. Fires as a result of the buffel have killed gidgee trees, skinks, and endangered parrots," Ms Dobson said.

The delegation called for the government to:

- Recognise buffel grass as a Weed of National Significance
- List it as a standalone Key Threatening Process under national law
- Fund a national coordinator and develop an action plan, including research, regional planning, and on-ground control to restore arid ecosystems and reduce fire risks to communities and infrastructure.

Gold for Red Centre

By Phil Williams

A national campaign by Tourism Central Australia has taken a Gold Award at the Australian Tourism Awards in Fremantle.

Several tourism operators represented Alice Springs, Central Australia and The Barkly at the 41st Qantas Australian Tourism Awards on 6 March, celebrating excellence across the nation's tourism sector.

Held at Fremantle Prison as part of the two-day Talking Tourism Business Forum, it brought together around 800 industry leaders and key stakeholders, representing more than 190 tourism operators, to unveil the nation's best, with winners selected from state and territory finalists.

Tourism Central Australia won gold for their 'Stories From The Heart' campaign in the 'Tourism Marketing and Campaigns' category.

The campaign showcased the region's breathtaking landscapes, rich cultural experiences, and renowned hospitality across TV screens, newspapers and other media across the country.

It included the Love Letters to Alice campaign which saw locals and leaders sharing stories about their own connections to Central Australia.

Tourism Central Australia CEO Danial Rochford said it was a proud moment for TCA when the win was announced, proving the reach and value of the campaign.

Safari Lodge Motel at Tennant Creek won the 3-3.5 star accommodation category after claiming silver in 2024

Intrepid Travel was nominated as a finalist in the 'Major Tour and Transport Operators' category, while Uluru Segway Tours was a finalist in the Tour and Transport operators and Adventure Tourism categories.

Other finalists from across the region were Athelle Outback Hideaway for Hosted Accommodation and Ayers Rock Resort for Cultural Tourism.

"We've garnered the world's attention here in the NT, with global brands like the New York Times and IHG telling our story and investing in our economy," Minister for Tourism and Hospitality and Minister for Major Events, Marie-Clare Boothby said.

"Now, once again, the Territory's tourism industry is in the national spotlight – a win for Territorians and a testament to all that makes the Territory great."

Manungurra directors travelled to Freemantle, WA for the Qantas Australian Tourism Awards held on 6 March.

Motel gets big award

TENNANT Creek's Safari Lodge Motel has secured a national award, claiming a top honour at the recent Australian Tourism Awards.

The 18-room motel, which is Aboriginal-owned and locally operated, is now officially the Best 3-3.5 Star Accommodation in the country.

Fresh off their Brolga NT Tourism Awards win in November, Warumungu Traditional Owners from the Manungurra Aboriginal Corporation attended the awards to accept the coveted prize.

This year's award is a step up from the Safari's runner-up award in the same category last year, so Manungurra directors were thrilled to be in there in person to see silver turn into to gold.

Manungurra Development Corporation bought the Safari Lodge Motel in 2018, catering to solo travellers, families and business guests.

Room options include executive suites, family friendly layouts, and accessible rooms designed to support a variety of mobility needs.

Around 800 guests from across Australia attended the prestigious event held in Freemantle, WA, which saw more than 170 finalists compete across 26 categories.

Destination Red Centre: Alice puts on a show for tourism

STRONG global interest in the Northern Territory and the Red Centre will see local businesses benefit as a major tourism industry event heads to Alice Springs this year.

The tourism and hospitality industry has chosen Alice Springs as the destination for the NT's premier tourism event, Destination NT, set for 11-14 November.

The event will include a plenary conference, an Aboriginal Tourism Forum, and conclude with the prestigious Brolga NT Tourism Awards.

This year's program will feature the Destination NT Conference plenary session, an Aboriginal Tourism Forum, and a series of targeted workshops and industry events designed to strengthen capability and collaboration across the sector.

Chair of Tourism Central Australia Patrick Bedford welcomed the announcement.

"This is a must-do event, and I encourage tourism operators and frankly anyone who benefits from the visitor economy to come along to Destination NT in Alice and experience all that Central Australia has to offer," Mr Bedford said.

"Tourism sits alongside four other key industries as a priority for growing the Territory economy, and Destination NT is about equipping owners, operators and investors to seize those opportunities."

Minister for Tourism and Hospitality Marie-Clare Boothby said Destination NT had become an important fixture on the Territory's tourism calendar.

"I am pleased to see the event head to Alice Springs in 2026 and bring that energy to the Red Centre. Centralians know how to put on a great show."

The Northern Territory ranked Australia's top destination and 14th in the world in the Best Places to Go for 2026 in The New York Times, while Uluru and the Red Centre have also featured in National Geographic Traveller's Best Places in the World to Travel, Conde Nast Best Places to Go, and BBC Travel's 20 Best Places to Travel.

Ground zero for buffel

TEEMING summer rains and flooding have transformed the Red Centre into a watery green wonderland.

Gone are our characteristic red and rugged hills, temporarily concealed by bright green, highly invasive buffel grass (cenchrus ciliaris), which is spreading across the landscape at breakneck speed in response to the big wet.

This month, ABC has thrown a national spotlight on how Central Australia is tackling the challenge of buffel.

Several local pastoralists and conservationists make a welcome and informed appearance on popular television program Landline, where, as reporter Courtney Wilson puts it: "Alice Springs is ground zero for buffel, the township is surrounded".

In February, weather conditions in the Centre and neighbouring Barkly whiplashed from daytime temperatures nudging 50C to wet conditions not seen for decades.

Some cattle stations received more than a year's worth of rainfall in downpours that at times felt biblical in intensity.

Readers of this column will be more than familiar with the often-thorny debate over whether buffel grass is a good thing or bad.

On the one hand, pastoralists rely on it as feed for a multi-million-dollar beef cattle industry; even now, while some are still busily repairing extensive flood damage, many are celebrating a potentially strong season ahead.

Conservationists are more circumspect. They point to the danger the grass represents for the Red Centre's desert ecology and for Aboriginal people using the landscape for food and cultural practices.

The grass has become more contentious since it was declared a weed in the NT from July 2024, followed by the launch of an NT Draft Buffel Grass Weed Management Plan 2026–2036 ahead of Christmas last year, both moves drawing mixed reactions from Centralians.

Feeling on the issue has only run hotter after it also emerged that conservation and Indigenous groups had applied for buffel to be declared a weed of national significance, or WoNS.

The WoNS listing ranks Australia's worst offending weeds for invasiveness and impact with a decision on the matter from the federal government originally expected late in 2025, now overdue.

In Landline's portrayal, several Centralian stakeholders were able to air their views.

PROGRESS LINE: NTG Weed's Branch buffel officer Max Arkley-Smith shows a strip of greying buffel near Kurrajong Drive that has been sprayed (left), and which now protects a downstream regrowth of native plants (right) from further weed invasion. (GLENN MORRISON)

Sitting at Kathleen Springs, a spring-fed waterhole at Watarrka, or Kings Canyon National Park, Luritja and Arrernte man John Liddle speaks to the advanced buffel infestation of the site and its increasing presence on surrounding spinifex country.

"(Buffel) can just race through this country at 100 miles an hour basically," Liddle says, "and it meets up with more buffel and just goes through miles and miles and miles of Country."

Kathleen Springs is important for Liddle, where Aboriginal people now "mourn for the Country it used to be, the plants and animals, the sacred places … covered in buffel.

"We can't take our kids out to learn culture; the hunting tracks are covered, and the plants that sustained us for thousands of years are disappearing."

SA Country Fire Service's Fire Analyst Simeon Telfer explains that as a tussock grass, buffel grows in between spinifex clumps, increasing the continuity of fuel in the case of fire.

"So it doesn't need to be as windy for the fire to spread from each clump to each clump.

"Where we've got it mapped as spinifex right now, it's being replaced by buffel grass.

"What we really would like is some national coordination [from a WoNS: ed] so we can undertake research into how it spreads, how quickly, what the fire danger rating should be and how we can mitigate the risk to community."

But pastoralists and the Cattleman's Union remain steadfastly skeptical.

They claim buffel is critical for the survival of the industry, which according to Cattleman's Association NT CEO Romy Carey, is worth $1.2 billion annually to the Territory.

On Garden Station, 117km north-east of Alice Springs, grazier Steve Hayes says that to "get rid of buffel would be crippling … I think the industry's changed so much you nearly wouldn't be able to survive without buffel."

In Alice Springs, meanwhile, local Landcare volunteers labour to restore a community rehabilitation site well advanced after many years of effort.

Volunteers Sue Morrish and Sunil Dhanji speak to a longer-term strategic view, describing the restored location as now a "living seed store" of up to 200 native species, where Dhanji hopes that "if we get a long-term solution for buffel, core areas like this can then spread out and repopulate the landscape".

Meanwhile, Alice-based Arid Lands Environment Centre recently posted a social media callout for supporters to sign a petition championing the WoNS declaration.

It is these conflicted viewpoints that stand out most from the program, for while it enables locals to speak frankly to a national audience, the Landline feature also reveals exactly how far we have yet to go to find a common way forward on buffel.

In the end, recently appointed Cattle Australia CEO Will Evans perhaps best articulates a way forward.

"I think there remains two sides to this conversation," he says, "and I think we need to find a way to break that wall down."

The story is available on ABC iview for catch up viewing.

Getting Good Stuff Done

Locals backing locals

By Gladys Barreta

THANKS to donations from locals, community groups like Alice Sings, which sits at the heart of the town's musical scene, will be able to start paying musicians, hire venues and offer singing lessons.

The Mparntwe Alice Springs Community Foundation (MASCF) Give2Give campaign has helped make this possible by supporting local community initiatives through its role as a community charity.

So far, 16 groups have received funding from the 2025 Give2Give campaign, with 12 of those being grassroots organisations that would not ordinarily be able to access charitable funding.

Through MASCF's special arrangement and designation as a community charity, the groups have been able to receive financial support thanks to generous donations of other locals.

MASCF executive director John Huigen said a key focus of the campaign was supporting ideas driven by the community itself.

"One of the key approaches is that things need to come from the community, led by community and for the community," he said.

"We can get people going with their good ideas sooner and easier, without the red tape backing local people to back other people and get things done.

"We have raised just shy of $70,000, with all of those funds being distributed to local people and small local groups so they can get out and do what they want to do."

Mr Huigen said a community working group had helped guide the campaign.

"There is a community working group that has worked on this campaign, led by Nicole Walsh, and they have been great as they are the ones who sift through the applications and help make the decisions," he said.

Founder of the town choir Alice Sings, Dave Crowe said the Give2Give funding would help sustain the group and support local musicians.

"The choir members themselves are very generous, but we also want to acknowledge the locals who donated the money," he said.

Alice Sings will receive $3,500, which will go towards paying musicians, hiring venues and running workshops for locals seeking singing lessons.

"Paying musicians is important to us because there are so many hardworking and talented musicians in this town," Mr Crowe said.

"We get to pay them for their time, their expertise and for arranging songs for the choir.

SINGS: Founder of Alice Sings Dave Crowe is thankful to receive funding to sustain the community choir. (MASCF)

"When we started the choir it was entirely volunteer-run, built on hours of blood, sweat and tears before we ever had any funding.

"While it's lovely to volunteer and give your time to community events, it's also nice to recognise people for the skills they have and make it less reliant on people giving up their free time.

"It means we can run events to a high standard with high-calibre musicians."

The group expects to hold its first workshops in April and May this year, with details to be shared on the Alice Sings website and social media pages.

A Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) Wedgetail aircraft, A30-004 that made a brief visit to Alice Springs in August last year has been deployed to the Middle East as the war in Iran escalated.

To further assist in the defence of the Gulf nations, around 85 Australian Defence Force (ADF) personnel have accompanied the aircraft.

The Wedgetail, a specially developed spy plane designed for long range reconnaissance flew out of the Williamtown Air Base near Newcastle early on Tuesday afternoon, 10 March, before a refuel a stopover at the Pearce Air Force Base at Bullsbrook near Perth before leaving Australian airspace.

The aircraft was scheduled to play an active role almost immediately after its arrival in the United Arab Emirates.

The Prime Minister, Anthony Albanese, indicated it would be operational by the end of the week for an initial four-week period for the "collective self-defence of Gulf nations".

An Australian Wedgetail last saw active service in 2025 providing assistance to Ukraine, in the war against Russia, where it was deployed more than 40 times over a three month period.

Fete calls for volunteers

By Gladys Barreta

THE Old Timers Fete is making an early call for more people to join its committee to help bring the iconic and much-loved community event to life.

The current committee is seeking three members to fill key roles, including an In-Person Donations Coordinator, Business Sponsorships and Donations Coordinator, and Stalls Coordinator.

On the day of the fete, around 300 helpers will also be needed to assist with set-up, stalls, the auction, lucky wheel, entertainment and pack-up.

Vice-chair of the Old Timers Fete Committee, Aaron Fredric said the committee was the heartbeat of the event, bringing its vision to life.

"The committee helps organise stalls, rally volunteers, secure sponsorships and keep everything running smoothly on the day," Mr Fredric said.

"Thanks to their hard work, the fete is not just an event but a vibrant celebration the whole community can enjoy."

Committee members will play a crucial role in preparations for the Old Timers Fete in August, helping with early planning, coordination and behind-the-scenes work to ensure stalls are ready, volunteers are organised and the day runs smoothly.

"Without the committee, the fete simply couldn't happen," Mr Fredric said.

With the coming months expected to be busy, the committee will also help ensure compliance requirements are met, with donations already being gratefully accepted.

To get involved, email oldtimers.fete@gmail.com

Sponsors and advertising partners are also being sought to help make the day a success. And for green thumbs, now is the time to start propagating plants for the ever-popular Plant Stall.

Relief for flood victims

By Gladys Barreta

IMMEDIATE financial support and accommodation assistance is available for flood-affected Central Australian residents under the joint Disaster Recovery Funding Arrangements (DRFA).

Adults can claim $611each, and $309 is available per child, capped at $1537 for each family, to help those experiencing personal hardship as a result of the flooding.

Temporary accommodation assistance of up to $1160 per family will also be available to help cover short-term accommodation costs while residents are unable to return home.

Re-establishment assistance of up to $8843 for each household can be claimed to support the replacement of essential household items such as whitegoods, furniture, bedding and basic household items.

Eligible primary producers in the Alice Springs, Barkly, Central Desert and MacDonnell LGAs will also be able to access freight subsidies.

Local governments in affected areas will receive support to carry out counter-disaster operations and restore essential public assets, including debris removal, emergency works and infrastructure repairs.

Alice Springs Mayor Asta Hill said extreme weather over the past month could have a significant impact on households, particularly in communities such as Alice Springs, where recovery can take time.

"These payments will help people meet immediate needs as they deal with the aftermath of the flooding, and any additional support for communities across Central Australia is welcome," she said.

"I also want to say thank you to the emergency services, volunteers and council crews who have done incredible work supporting the clean-up and helping our community recover."

Northern Territory Chief Minister Lia Finocchiaro said the Territory Government was working closely with the Federal Government to ensure affected communities received practical support, including immediate relief payments for Imangara residents and assistance for households and primary producers impacted by flooding.

"Our priority is restoring road access, reconnecting essential services and helping families, pastoralists, cattle stations and local councils recover as quickly and safely as possible," she said.

Serial killer 'living in fear' trying to evade attention

A monstrous serial killer who committed one of the Barkly's saddest and most grisly murders was back in the news recently, after moving into a NSW home with an elderly woman and two foster children.

Ross Browning, a 19-year-old Darwin-based sailor who was travelling home for holidays in 1981, had promised his parents he wouldn't pick up hitchhikers on his journey south.

However, he ran into a dodgy character at Berry Springs and gave him a lift to the Threeways Roadhouse, near Tennant Creek, where they met the evil Reginald Arthurell who was drinking at the bar.

Before long a plan was hatched to rob Browning, and the trio drove a short distance along the Barkly Highway and pulled off the road.

The two men bashed Browning, dumped him in bushland, stole his pay packet and car, and headed back to Threeways.

Though Browning had been badly battered he was clinging to life when his assailants returned to the scene and bashed him to death.

Now-deceased police officer Rod Paskins, who had been stationed in Tennant Creek, was one of the officers sent to investigate.

Some years ago, his widow, Daphne, said her husband was never the same again.

"It was very traumatic, the scene was ghastly and it haunted him for the rest of his life," she said.

Arthurell served only six years in the Darwin Correctional Centre for the manslaughter of Browning after murder charges were downgraded.

He was later extradited to NSW where he was sentenced to jail for 11 years for killing his stepfather.

While on parole, he callously bludgeoned to death his partner - a deeply religious woman who had befriended him while he was in jail.

He was sentenced to 24 years jail after pleading guilty to her manslaughter.

He is also the prime suspect in the murders of at least four other people, including a notorious triple killing near Mount Isa in 1978.

Arthurell emerged from Long Bay Prison in 2020 as 'Regina' having transitioned during the sentence.

He was released on a five-year extended supervision order, which expired in December 2024.

A short stint in an aged care facility came to an abrupt end when Arthurell's identity was revealed; and late last year he moved in with an elderly woman who cared for two foster children, aged 12 and 14.

The woman's daughter, who had been worried about the two children and concerned her mother was being scammed by Arthurell, was tipped off to do a Google search on her mother's new friend.

Shocked at her findings, she reported the matter to police and the Department of Corrective Services, asking why no checks had been made.

The woman's words of warning fell on deaf ears, and authorities took no action until she recently revealed the situation on-air to 2GB radio host Ben Fordham.

Finally, people are listening. The NSW Government is in crisis mode and the Families and Communities Minister is scrambling to find excuses as to why two young people were left exposed to such a sinister and depraved killer.

Meanwhile, the tables are turning on the aging, wheelchair-bound Arthurell.

He was moved to Armidale a couple of weeks ago and, unwelcome everywhere, has been shifted from pillar to post.

The killer seems to be living in fear and appears to be most rattled by reporters who have tracked him down and are holding him to account for his horrific crimes.

Reginald Arthurell, now known as Regina, is living in Armidale after being moved from an aged care facility. He was also removed from the home of an elderly woman who befriended him and who had two young foster children.

IWD brekkie

By Phil Williams

MADIGAN'S Function Room at the Desert Park was filled to almost overflowing for the International Women's Day Breakfast on 6 March.

A late venue change to bring the event indoors due to inclement weather didn't dampen the spirits.

Around 90 people of all ages were on hand to listen to accomplished journalist and broadcaster Rae Johnston speak at the 'Give To Gain' themed breakfast.

Ms Johnston, whose credits include Radio National's Download This Show and TV programs such as Back Roads, shared insights from her career in science and technology as well as anecdotes of growing up in the Blue Mountains and life as a single mother.

She was the first Science and Technology Editor for NITV at SBS and the first female editor of Gizmodo Australia.

Between courses, guests were entertained by singer Alison Mapleson.

As a fundraiser for the Women's Museum of Australia, the event included a silent auction of more than a dozen donated items including gift hampers, jewellery and artworks.

CEO on move

By Phil Williams

AFTER less than three years Alice Springs Town Council (ASTC) is on the hunt for a new CEO after it announced Andrew Wilsmore would step down from his role to take up an opportunity closer to home.

The recruitment for his replacement will be conducted in accordance with the Local Government Act.

Beginning the role in June 2023, Mr Wilsmore has served as CEO during a significant period for the organisation.

During his time he has supported the delivery of key community services and major projects while guiding Council through challenges and opportunities facing Alice Springs.

Mr Wilsmore said his decision to leave Alice Springs had not been easy.

"This decision is bittersweet," he said.

"Alice Springs is a remarkable community, and it has been a privilege to work alongside the dedicated staff at Council and the elected members who care deeply about this town.

"While the opportunity to be closer to home is important for my family, I will always have a strong connection to Alice Springs.

"The people here care deeply about their community, and that passion is something I will carry with me."

Mr Wilsmore will leave a strong legacy at Alice Springs Town Council, having overseen several major projects.

These include the construction and opening of both the Adventure Park at the Aquatic and Leisure Centre and Newland Skate and Play Precinct, the beginning of the Regenerating the Alice Town Centre project and the new library build.

Thanking Mr Wilsmore, Mayor Asta Hill said he would leave a lasting impact.

"On behalf of the elected members and the entire community, I would like to say a sincere thank you to Andrew for his dedication during his time as CEO," she said.

"Andrew has been a wonderful leader for our community and the work that he's helped Council achieve will leave a lasting impact for generations to come.

"We are sad to see him go but wish him all the best in his next chapter."

Mr Wilsmore will continue as Alice Springs Town Council CEO until June.

"I am proud of the work we have done across the past three years as a team and I believe there's a really bright future for Alice Springs," he said.

"I've been continually impressed by the commitment of Council teams who work hard every day to improve our town.

"It has been an honour to work with them."

Recruits report for duty

IN a bid by the Territory government to strengthen the frontline workforce of NT Corrections, a new generation of Youth Justice Officers started an eight-week training course in Darwin last week.

A further group of 10 will begin training in Alice Springs in April.

The 22 new recruits began the training program at Holtze Youth Detention Centre.

It will equip them with the operational, behavioural and legislative skills needed to meet the demands of working in youth detention.

Minister for Corrections Gerard Maley said there was a strong interest in the roles, reflecting growing interest playing a part in keeping the community safe while supporting better outcomes for young people in the justice system.

"Youth Justice Officers play a critical role in maintaining safety and order within our youth detention centres while helping young people engage with programs and supports," Mr Maley said.

"These recruits are stepping into an important role, and this training ensures they are equipped with the skills and knowledge needed to work in our corrections system."

The training combines classroom learning, scenario-based components and practical assessments to ensure recruits are well equipped to supervise young people and respond to complex situations.

The course covers areas including legislative and policy foundations, detention operations, duty of care, and statutory responsibilities, operational safety and incident responses along with cultural competency and practical custodial skills.

The recruits are expected to graduate on 1 May before moving into operational roles and will work to attain a Certificate IV in Youth Justice.

On 13 April, another 10 recruits will begin their training in Alice Springs, following strong interest in the positions.

More than 90 applications were submitted for the roles at the Youth Intake and Transfer Facility, with the Alice Springs recruits expected to graduate in early June.

INTEREST: Corrections Minister Gerard Maley with Deputy Corrections Commisioner Kate Chambers and Commisioner Matthew Varley, said there had been strong interest in the new roles. (Phil Williams)

The yearly frock-up

By Gladys Barreta

WITH a love for the 1990s film 'The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert', Alice Springs local Stuart Ord thought it would be fitting to bring the queens to the Red Centre once again.

From that idea, the glamorous, glittering and colourful fabALICE Festival was born.

With a background in tourism, Stuart has helped create and grow the four-day event into a unique showcase of drag, family-friendly events and cabaret performances, celebrating the inclusivity and diversity of the Red Centre.

The Garden Guru

Geoff Miers

Being able to deal with a variety of pests, such as aphids while knowing other beneficial insects and other creatures in my garden are safe gives me a different perspective.

Aphids can be found on a range of local natives including the Desert Rose. (Rachal Van Wyk)

Aphids can be a real pest

WITH temperatures dropping and gardens flush with new growth conditions are absolutely ideal for aphides, the destructive lice of the plant kingdom.

With many gardeners still struggling with mealy bug, lawn grub and an array of caterpillars and grubs, they should also focus on aphides as these tiny critters can cause lots of problems and can seriously impact on plant health.

Aphids are often referred to as plant lice, tiny insects that exist near the bottom of the food chain.

They are sap-suckers. piercing the leaf of plants to tap into the sap stream, and they breed prolifically when climate conditions are right.

The rain and the increased humidity have seen aphides emerging throughout the garden.

Conditions are just right now and they certainly are breeding. One day there can be none visible and within a day or two literally thousands appear.

Daily inspections of the vegetable and flowering annual gardens should occur for the next few weeks until it really cools down.

Total garden inspections should really occur, as aside from on many vegetables and flowering annuals, aphids can be found on a range of local natives like the Desert Rose, on exotics like the Pirie Winkle and roses, and they love native grasses and can even be found on water lilies.

Aphids can come in various forms and colours, however they are very small, are often found on the underside of the leaf or at the new tip growth and when noticeable are usually visible in large numbers.

Often a sticky substance may also be visible on the leaf. This is called honey dew; it is a residue excreted by the aphids as they feed.

Ants love this honey dew and often ants present on the affected plant is the first indication of the aphids' presence.

Aphids in piercing the cell structure of the plant are damaging individual cells and this can lead to leaf distortion, particularly on new growth as it develops. Damage to flowers and fruitlets can also occur.

Aphids can be responsible for example in the loss of literally an entire crop of fruit or citrus in its formative weeks.

Aphids can also carry disease and in moving over a plant may be spreading powdery mildew or other fungal disease.

Aphids, as referred to previously, deposit a sweet honey-like substance that can if it builds up on the foliage of a plant can lead to sooty mould forming on the leaves.

This spoils the appearance of the plant and can, in severe cases, impact on the plant's, function thus impacting on the plant's health.

Aphids fortunately are relatively easy to manage - the key is being aware of their presence before they have done untold harm.

There are a number of strategies that may be undertaken.

On first noticing the presence of aphids I generally use my fingers and physically squash them.

This involves frequent monitoring at least daily.

Short sharp squirts with water from the hose may dislodge the aphids and they may not have the capacity to re-infest the plant.

White oil and Natrasoap are two very environmentally safe products that are most affective against aphids.

Effectively these products smother the blighters and they die.

Homemade soap recipes are also affective.

Neem oil is another most natural product that is fast-acting and most effective against aphides.

Confidor, a Yates product, is another solution that is classified as environmentally friendly and works extremely well on aphids.

It is also effective on a range of other pesty insects that can cause lots of aggravation to the home gardener.

Consider using the Richgo product Bug Killer, all you need to do is sprinkle it around the affected plant and water it in well.

The chemical will be taken up through the sap steam and anything that sucks on the plant will die.

Anti-scale is also often suggested as a handy product to control aphides.

This product is largely oil-based, although it does have as an active constituent Maldison, commonly referred to as Malathion.

Use on ornamentals, not food plants.

For severe infestations where a quick solution is needed the home gardener may consider using Pyrethrum.

Pyrethrum is a contact spray working within minutes of application, however it has only a very short life span.

This is a plus actually as it breaks down in sunlight and becomes harmless quickly - that is harmless to humans, pets, birds, etc.

In summary, be vigilant, use your fingers first and if numbers quickly explode look to one of the solutions offered above.

Be warned, often people notice aphids after they have passed.

They notice the sticky honey dew and the shed skins of the aphids - any treatment then is a waste of time and dollars.

From Priscilla to fabALICE

By Gladys Barreta

DUO: Partners Sonya Bertotto and a frocked-up Stuart Ord at a previous fabALICE Festival.

WHEN The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert travelled to the outback in its famous pink bus, the story ended in Alice Springs.

The film follows drag performers Tick, Adam and Bernadette as they journey from Sydney to Alice Springs to perform a cabaret show at Lasseters Hotel Casino.

For Alice Springs local Stuart Ord, it seemed only fitting queens would one day return to the Red Centre and put on a show for locals again.

Inspired by the 1994 cult classic, Stuart began wondering if another celebration of drag, colour and performance could find a home in Alice Springs.

After moving to the town in 2015 for what was meant to be a nine-month contract managing Tourism Central Australia, he quickly fell in love with the place.

A love story for Alice that seems far too common.

"I thought if I didn't like it, I'd just go back to Victoria," he said.

"And then when I got here, I stayed and never went back."

Stuart had previously worked in national park management in Victoria and ski resorts before moving into tourism.

With encouragement from tourism colleagues, he gathered an inaugural committee and pitched the idea of a festival inspired by Priscilla.

The first fabALICE Festival was held in 2019.

Now in its seventh year, the four-day event brings drag performances, cabaret shows and family-friendly events to the Red Centre, celebrating diversity, inclusivity and self-expression.

Each year thousands gather in the Todd Mall to watch performers take to the stage in a dazzling display of glitter and glamour.

Stuart said seeing the community come together was one of the most rewarding parts of the festival.

"I love standing back with my fabALICE shirt on and watching the smiles on people's faces," he said.

"To me that's worth a million dollars because I know we're doing something right."

As the driving force behind the event, Stuart relishes the chance to frock up and get shiny once a year during the festival, with his partner, Sonya ,creating a new costume each time.

"I'm totally out of my comfort zone when I dress up," he said.

"But it's a bit of fun. If people want to laugh about me wearing a dress once a year, that's their problem, not mine."

Beyond the glitz and glamour, Stuart said fabALICE was also about creating a safe and welcoming space for the LGBTQIA+ community.

"fabALICE gives the LGBTIQ+ community somewhere they feel safe where they can come together, enjoy themselves and connect," he said.

The festival also delivers a strong boost for the local economy, with businesses across Alice Springs supporting the event each year.

"I love that we deliver economic outcomes for the community," Stuart said.

"The businesses in Alice are amazing... they really get behind the festival."

This year the festival will even feature its own "budget Barbie bus" tour, inspired by the iconic vehicle from Priscilla.

While Stuart has stepped back from full-time tourism work to spend more time with his grandchildren, he still keeps busy consulting in the sector and serving on several local boards.

He's currently a tourism consultant, working with Aboriginal communities, a board member of Hermannsburg Historical Society managing the old 1877 precinct, working in the Western Macs, and the Chair of a family day care group.

But fabALICE remains among his greatest passions.

"Alice Springs has been through some tough times with negative reporting," he said.

"Events like this give the community a chance to come together and have a lot of fun.

"We have a great community despite what's reported on media and I want people to see that."

Looking to the future, Stuart hopes to expand Indigenous involvement in the festival and continue growing fabALICE into a nationally recognised event.

"Drag queens have visited Aboriginal communities during the festival and people love it," he said.

"I'd love to see even more Indigenous representation involved."

Reflecting on the inspiration behind the festival, Stuart said the message of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert still resonated today.

"It's interesting to look back at Priscilla, Queen of the Desert, which was made about 30 years ago.

"The prejudices and challenges the characters faced on their journey show that while it's a funny film, it's also a sad one," he said.

"When you compare it to where we are now in terms of acceptance, you can see how far things have come. and that is something to celebrate."

Family runs deep: Sentimental Value

THE superb Reinsve (Armand, SFF 2024) plays Nora Borg, an accomplished stage actress experiencing deep anxiety about performing.

When she and her sister Agnes are reunited with their estranged father, the once-revered director Gustav (Skarsgard), he asks Nora to take the lead role in a new, deeply personal film – his comeback, he hopes.

With Gustav having abandoned his family decades prior, Nora angrily declines his artistic overtures.

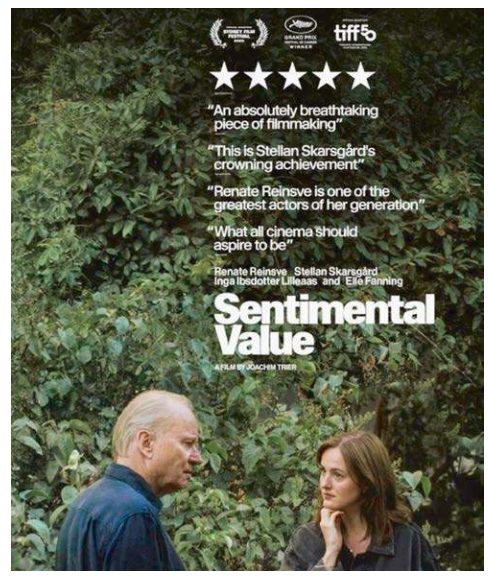

He instead casts eager Hollywood star Rachel Kemp (Fanning), and begins work on the ambitious and risky film.

But filial connections run deep, and the personal and the artistic intersect in ways that transcend the practicalities of creation.

Profound, funny and deeply moving, Sentimental Value finds Trier at the height of his considerable directorial powers.

"The film balances fiction with something deeply personal, carrying the weight of inherited trauma, artistic legacy, and the ways creativity can become a coping mechanism when normal communication fails." - Guillermo Troncoso, Screen Realm

135 minutes | Drama | Rated MA15+ | Directed by Joachim Trier | Elle Fanning, Renate Reinsve, Stellan Skarsgard | Limited Sessions | Opens 21 March

Sentimental Value is screening at Alive Springs Cinema.

Diesel is bringing 'By Request' tour to Alice Springs

BELOVED Australian singer-songwriter and guitarist Diesel is headed to Alice Springs after extending his successful By Request regional tour, adding 21 more shows across Australia this year.

Following strong demand during the current 15-date regional run, the expanded tour will travel across the country until April, giving fans the chance to shape each night's setlist - hitting the Araluen Arts Centre on 20 March.

The tour will began in Tasmania in January before heading through New South Wales, Queensland, the Northern Territory, South Australia, the ACT and Victoria, concluding with a hometown performance at the iconic Sydney Opera House on 26 April.

Unlike a traditional concert, the By Request tour invites audiences to choose the songs performed on the night, creating a unique experience for the artist and fans.

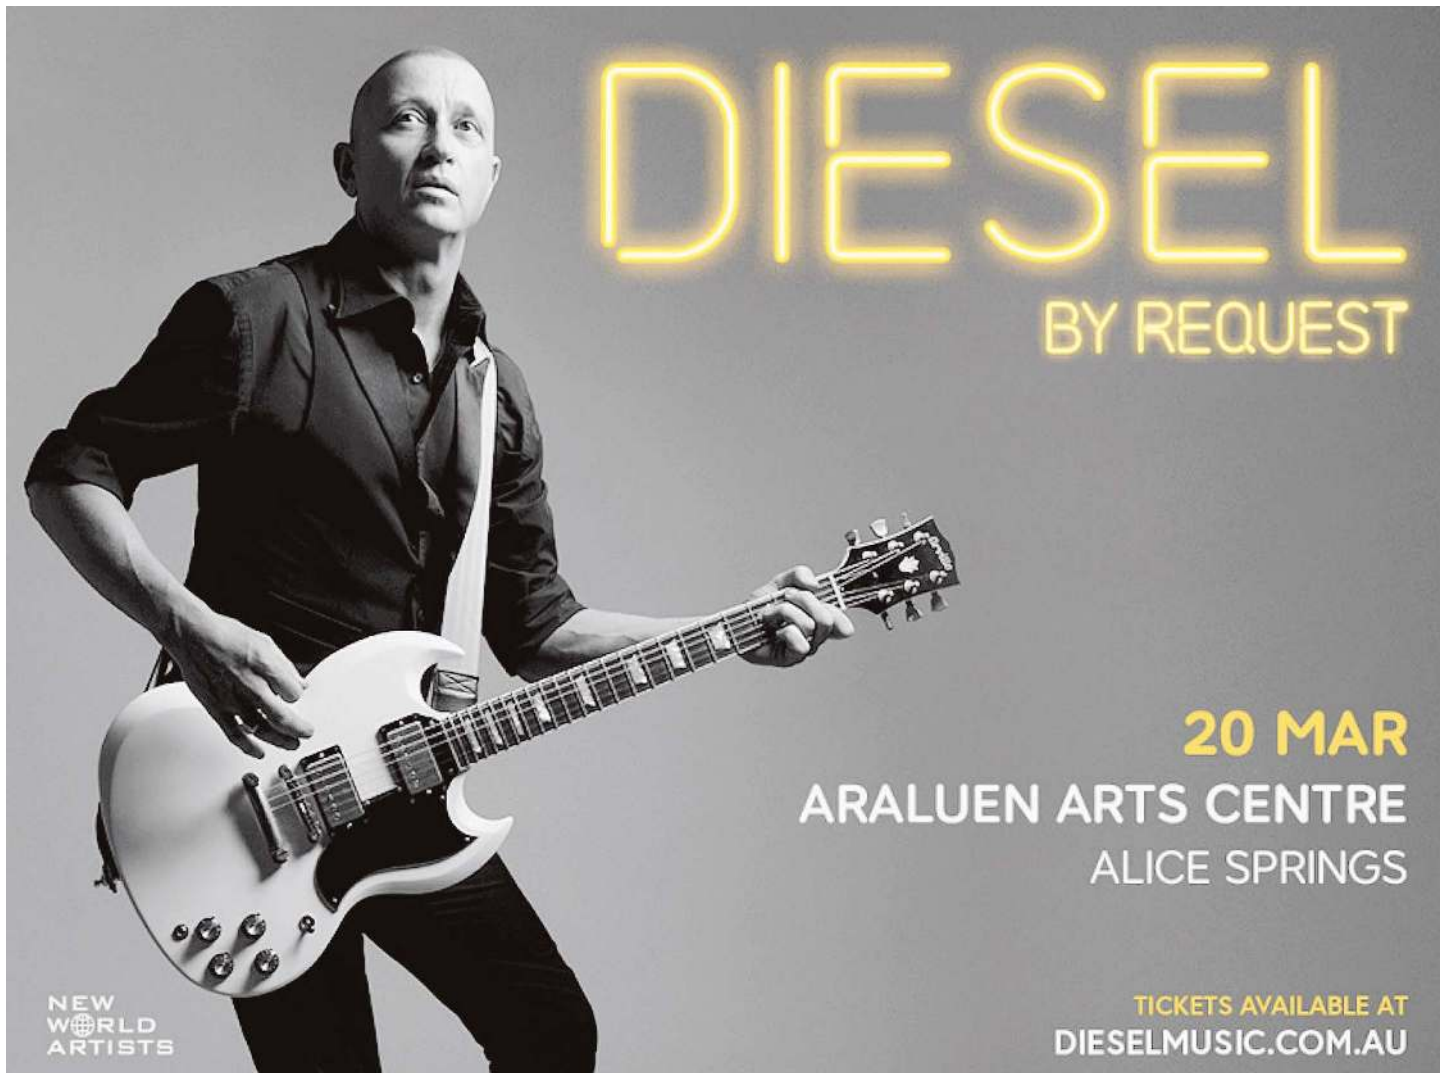

"It's safe to say that when an artist makes a set list, they're second-guessing what people want to hear most of the time," Diesel said.

"With the By Request tour, I feel like I'm hitting the sweet spot every night when I compile a set full of songs and anecdotes directly given to me by the people who are going to be there."

Fans can expect a career-spanning mix of songs, ranging from Diesel's debut album Johnny Diesel & the Injectors released in 1989, through to his most recent record, Bootleg Melancholy.

The shows may also feature covers from artists who have influenced his music.

Born in the United States and based in Australia, Diesel, whose real name is Mark Lizotte, first gained attention as frontman of the band Johnny Diesel & the Injectors before launching a successful solo career in the 1990s.

SHAPE-THE-NIGHT: DIESEL - BY REQUEST will be on show at Araluen Arts Centre on Friday, 20 March.

Over the decades he has released multiple number-one albums and won several ARIA Awards, including three consecutive wins in 1993, 1994 and 1995.

His most recent album, Bootleg Melancholy, released in 2023, marked his 17th studio album and was praised for its strong songwriting and blend of blues, soul and rock influences.

Book crawl coming to town

By Gladys Barreta

AN international initiative bringing together bookshops and book lovers from around the world, the Global Book Crawl will be heading to Alice Springs in April.

The Global Book Crawl aiming to unite local bookshops in a celebration of literature, community and culture will take place in Alice Springs from 20 to 26 April.

A book crawl is an adventure through the heart of a city or region's local bookshops, where participants visit multiple stores, connect with local book culture and discover hidden literary gems.

Eight local businesses will take part in the Alice Springs crawl.

Alice Springs Global Book Crawl coordinator Bronwyn Druce from Red Kangaroo Books said organising the event in Central Australia required some creative thinking.

"As the only independent bookshop within approximately a 1,500km radius, we had to think creatively about what a book crawl might look like in Central Australia," she said.

"Luckily, Mparntwe/Alice Springs is home to many wonderful independent businesses that also sell a carefully curated selection of books."

Participating venues include local publisher IAD Press, as well as the art spaces Araluen Arts Centre and Tjanpi Desert Weavers.

Other businesses joining the crawl include Sugar & Spice, Novita Gifts, The Paper Shoppe and the Olive Pink Garden Gift Shop.

"We hope our bookish community and visiting book lovers will not only discover some wonderful books and have fun along the way, but also explore and support the fantastic independent businesses that make our town so special," Ms Druce said.

Participants can drop into their local bookshop in April to pick up a Global Book Crawl passport and start planning their route.

Readers are also encouraged to share their experiences on social media using #globalbookcrawl and tagging @global.bookcrawl.australia to showcase local bookshops to a worldwide audience.

BOOKS: Alice Springs will host a Global Book Crawl from 20-26 April.

We need to capture stories before they disappear

By Natalie Stockdale, author and memoir writer

OVER the decades I spent living in remote parts of the Northern Territory including Elliott and western Queensland, I came to know many older people whose lives had been shaped by the land and small towns.

As a teacher, a governess, and later running sheep and cattle stations with my husband, I heard stories well worth preserving — stories of hard work, humour, mateship, natural disasters, and resilience that characterise families and communities.

Many of those stories were remarkable, yet few were ever written down.

They lived in conversation, shared around kitchen tables, barbecues and bars, or during long drives between properties.

We assumed those stories would always be there.

But unless we make a sincere effort to capture these stories, they disappear.

Sometimes, sooner than we expect.

Dementia is one of the most significant health challenges facing Australia.

Dementia Australia estimates that around 446,500 Australians are currently living with dementia, and that number is expected to rise in the years ahead.

For many families, dementia brings an extra layer of grief because it can take away a person's ability to recall and share their own life story.

The change is often gradual.

A name is forgotten. A timeline is muddled. Stories that once came easily are harder to follow.

Over time, whole chapters become impossible to access, and families are left with pieces and unanswered questions.

Sadly, my father now lives with dementia, and there is a particular kind of sadness that comes with it. It is the feeling of… "We missed it".

Author Natalie Stockdale urges people to record loved ones' stories before it's too late.

We missed the chance to sit down while his memory was still clear and capture his life story in full — the experiences, the decisions, the lessons, and the moments that shaped who he is.

World Storytelling Day, observed on 20 March, is a reminder of how important these stories are.

Stories are precious.

They hold families together and contain the details that rarely appear in official records: what people valued, how they coped in hard times, what made them laugh, who they loved, why they made certain decisions, and the lessons life taught them.

Remarkable life stories are abundant across rural Australia.

Without deliberate effort, they can disappear within a generation.

Many people plan to write things down "one day".

The problem is that "one day" may be too late.

Writing a life story is one of the simplest ways to preserve what matters.

Memoirs capture the voice and personality of people, their version of events, and the context that brings life to family photos.

For children and grandchildren, memoirs are a source of comfort and connection for decades.

A memoir does not require perfect recall or a polished manuscript.

It can begin with a few simple conversations and a handful of questions.

Where did you grow up?

What was school like?

What work did you do?

Who were your closest people?

What are you proud of?

What do you hope your family understands about your life?

One memory often leads to another. As people talk, stories return. Details emerge. The character becomes clearer.

World Storytelling Day reminds us to capture life stories before it's too late.

If there is someone in your life whose story matters to you — a parent, a grandparent, an elderly neighbour — sit down and begin.

Ask the questions. Listen carefully. Write things down and turn them into a memoir.

Because once a story disappears, it is lost forever.

Heat of the moment

The highly anticipated second season of crime comedy Deadloch takes detective duo Dulcie and Eddie to Darwin for a new mystery. Kate Box tells Siobhan Duck how she copes with the tropical climate and what viewers can expect from the croc-infested chapter

Killer instincts: From left, Madeleine Sami, Alicia Gardiner, Kate Box, Nina Oyama and new cast member Luke Hemsworth lead season two of Deadloch. Images: Kane Skenner/Prime Video

KATE Box is so hot right now (in more ways than one).

In a case of life imitating art – minus the murder and mayhem – Box moved to Darwin with her young family not long before her Deadloch character Dulcie Collins headed north to investigate a new case.

"So, between the hot flashes of perimenopause and the average 32-degree day, it's a pretty glamorous place to catch me in," she laughs of the practicalities of dealing with the heat and humidity of her new hometown.

"I've just accepted the frizz. And because my head gets hot all the time, I'm having to use a medicated shampoo.

"There's all these things I didn't quite expect to be needing in my life."

Unlike Dulcie, Box was no stranger to Darwin before making her real-life move.

"My parents moved up here in the late 1980s and I went to Wanguri Primary," she says.

"I've been in Darwin for just over a year now. You don't get called a local up here unless you've lived here for at least 70 years, so I'm still very much an outsider.

"But I'm quite taken by the place."

Box believes viewers will likewise fall in love with the Top End when they clap eyes on what Deadloch creators Kate McCartney and Kate McLennan (aka "The Kates") have drummed up for this latest instalment of their runaway hit.

The first season of Deadloch reached the list of top 10 TV shows for streaming service Prime Video in more than 165 countries, including the US, UK, and Canada. The series also won five AACTA Awards, including Best Acting in a Comedy for Box and Best Screenplay in Television, and was nominated for an International Emmy Award.

And Deadloch fans are now proving every bit as ardent as those who loved Box in Wentworth.

"But I don't think there's as many people going as Dulcie to Halloween as there are going as Lou Kelly," she smiles of the killer con she played in the prison drama's final seasons.

"It's a less interesting costume. I suppose not everyone's interested in quick-dry pants."

Last month, Binge announced Wentworth was following the lead of the show's most famous villain The Freak (Pamela Rabe) and coming back from the dead. The reboot, Wentworth: The Next Chapter will focus on characters navigating life on parole.

"The fan base is so magnificent for Wentworth and it's absolutely their doing that this show is coming back," she smiles of the series, which itself began as a reboot of Prisoner.

"I think people just fell in love with the world of Wentworth. And I think there was always a feeling that it was never complete. And so, I'm really looking forward to seeing what they're reimagining."

Likewise, Box always looks forward to seeing what the Kates do next. She's hopeful that there's scope for Deadloch to also return for future seasons, joking that the show could partner with Tourism Australia and feature cities around the country as the backdrops to future murders.

Far from feeling pressure to live up to the success of Deadloch's first season, Box insists: "I just have so much trust in the Kates that I didn't feel that."

And after reading the scripts for season two, she knew she was in for another wild ride.

Name game: From left, Kate Box on the Darwin set of Deadloch with the crime comedy's creators Kate McLennan and Kate McCartney.

It picks up after Dulcie and her loud-mouth, blow-in detective partner Eddie Redcliffe (Madeleine Sami) unmasked the serial killer terrorising men in their Tasmanian township. Together with her overly supportive wife Cath (Alicia Gardiner), the dogged cop has relocated to Eddie's home town of Barra Creek to figure out what happened to Bushy, her former policing partner.

Despite her best intentions, the straitlaced Dulcie feels like a fish out of water surrounded by big crocs and the even bigger personalities of the Darwin locals.

"Very much in the same way that Tassie was a huge character in the first half, you get that in the second season [with Darwin]," she says of the new instalment showcasing the beauty of her adopted home.

"Shooting up here some days felt like this deeply colour-saturated, sweat-drenched, queer Western. It feels like real outlaw territory."

Box has grown particularly close to Gardiner and Sami, the trio meeting regularly for a sunset beer at the Darwin Ski Club once they finished shooting for the day.

"I mean, we were stuck on an island together, and then we've been stranded here up north together," she laughs.

"And when you're shooting something as intense as this, you do feel like you're in a very crazy adult school camp where you just have to eat, play, work and do everything together.

"So, it's a pretty bonding experience. I imagine it would be awful if we didn't like each other. So, thank god we do."

She's equally impressed with the newcomers to the Deadloch party, among them Luke Hemsworth as a celebrity croc wrestler with a penchant for tight shorts and Steve Bisley as Eddie's loud-mouth estranged father.

"You come into this series as a straight, white, middle-aged man, and you're certainly not going to be centred," Box enthuses of Hemsworth playing a role that is a hilarious mix of Joe Exotic and Robert Irwin.

"And he just had such an incredible sense of humour about it, and understood the tone of the show very, very quickly.

"He was a total delight to work with. I love meeting all the characters who are in these warring croc teams.

"You read it on the page, and then once the casting came in, it's just such an adrenaline rush to see these bizarre and wonderful humans come to life."

Although she's got a great working relationship with the Kates, Box says: "The Kates are a duo unto themselves and I am very much like the Kate add-on.

"I'm the taller one who can just looks over their shoulders, going: 'I like what you're doing! Can I join in?'"

Box isn't the only person – or even the only Kate – who felt that way this season.

"We had 11 Kates working on it this time," she smiles.

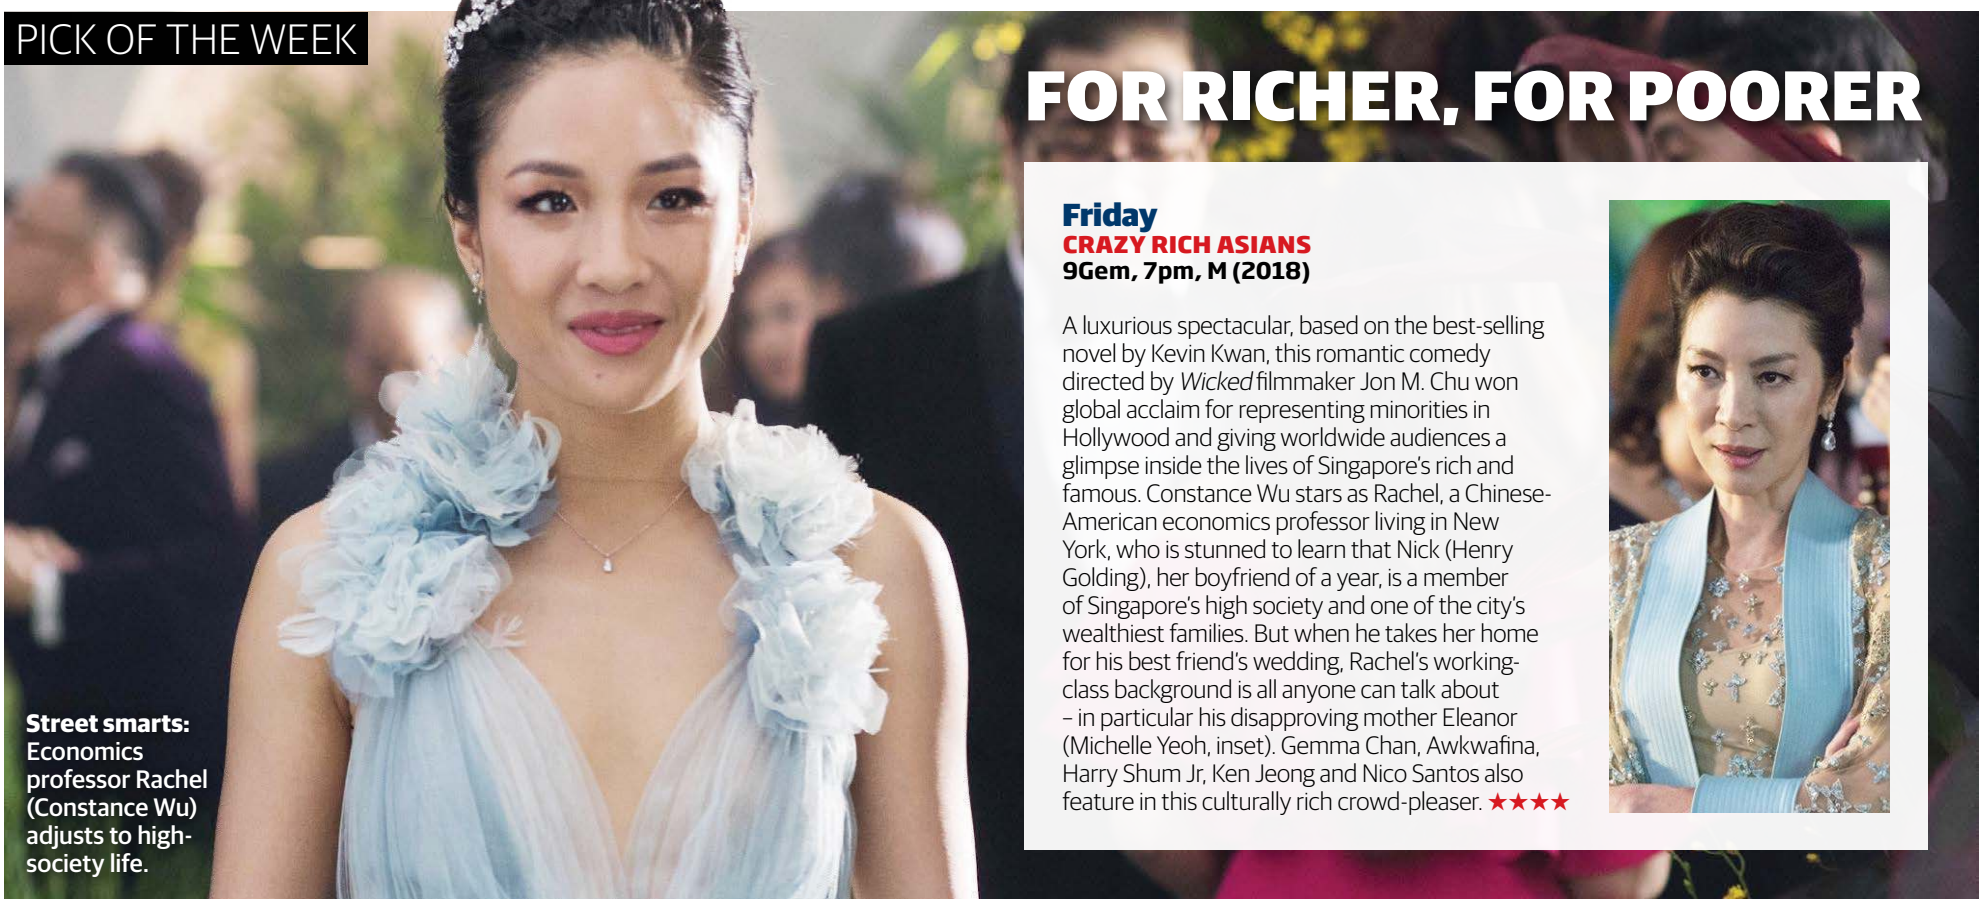

"So, we were all just called by our surnames.

"I am used to that though. Growing up, playing netball – I was goalkeeper because I am tall and lazy – and the whole defence side were Kates. So, it was all Kates in our third of the court."

PICK OF THE WEEK

Street smarts: Economics professor Rachel (Constance Wu) adjusts to high-society life.

FOR RICHER, FOR POORER

Friday
CRAZY RICH ASIANS
9Gem, 7pm, M (2018)

A luxurious spectacular, based on the best-selling novel by Kevin Kwan, this romantic comedy directed by Wicked filmmaker Jon M. Chu won global acclaim for representing minorities in Hollywood and giving worldwide audiences a glimpse inside the lives of Singapore's rich and famous. Constance Wu stars as Rachel, a Chinese-American economics professor living in New York, who is stunned to learn that Nick (Henry Golding), her boyfriend of a year, is a member of Singapore's high society and one of the city's wealthiest families. But when he takes her home for his best friend's wedding, Rachel's working-class background is all anyone can talk about – in particular his disapproving mother Eleanor (Michelle Yeoh, inset). Gemma Chan, Awkwafina, Harry Shum Jr, Ken Jeong and Nico Santos also feature in this culturally rich crowd-pleaser. ★★★★

THE DRESSMAKER
7mate, Friday, 7pm, M (2015)

Kate Winslet (pictured with Liam Hemsworth) is in fine form here as Tilly Dunnage, a complicated woman who returns to her rural Australian hometown after years honing her dressmaking craft in Europe. Turning up with her sewing machine and a lifetime's worth of baggage, Tilly sets about bringing down her enemies with her beautiful outfits. Her reappearance is not given the warmest of welcomes: her mother Molly (a brilliant Judy Davis) doesn't even recognise her. ★★★★

MEN IN BLACK 3
Seven, Saturday, 6.30pm, M (2012)

Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones are back in a third instalment of this popular '90s franchise. When Boris the Animal (Flight of the Conchords' Jemaine Clement) deletes Agent K (Tommy Lee Jones) from history, Agent J (Will Smith) is forced to travel back in time and team up with his partner's younger equivalent (Josh Brolin, pictured, left, with Smith) to save the universe. Although the third entry is not as good as the first, it is certainly a big improvement on the freewheeling second flick. ★★★

DUNKIRK
Imparja, Saturday, 8pm, M (2017)

With Dunkirk, British director Christopher Nolan (Inception, The Dark Knight) turns his attention to the eponymous battle fought during the second World War. After an evacuation mission is launched to rescue Allied troops stranded on the beaches of Dunkirk, they fall under attack from German forces. With little dialogue, spectacular sound editing and a score from Hans Zimmer, it's a feat of filmmaking. Stars Fionn Whitehead, Harry Styles and Kenneth Branagh (pictured). ★★★★

KINGSMAN: THE GOLDEN CIRCLE
7mate, Sunday, 7pm, MA15+ (2017)

Picking up shortly after the first Kingsman movie, The Golden Circle stars Taron Egerton (pictured) as Gary "Eggsy" Unwin, a street-kid-turned-suave-spy who finds himself chasing a villain who is holding the whole world hostage. After the English headquarters of his agency is blown up, Eggsy's mission takes him to the United States, where he teams up with his American counterpart Jack Daniels (Pedro Pascal, The Last of Us) as well as his old mentor (Colin Firth). ★★★★

PACIFIC RIM
9Go!, Monday, 7pm, M (2013)

In a futuristic world, Earth's bravest and best pilot massive fighting machines in a bid to save humanity from giant invaders from another dimension. Idris Elba (pictured) plays Marshal Stacker Pentecost, the wily old soldier in charge of a seemingly hopeless cause and Charlie Hunnam (Sons of Anarchy) is Raleigh Becket, a talented but self-loathing pilot. Don't think too much about the plot, just enjoy the spectacular visuals from acclaimed director Guillermo del Toro (Frankenstein). ★★★

OPERATION FORTUNE: RUSE DE GUERRE
9Go!, Tuesday, 8.30pm, M (2023)

Casting Jason Statham (pictured) as a morally ambiguous super spy is a no-brainer, but this Guy Ritchie-directed action comedy is full of surprises from there out. On the trail of a mysterious device known as "the Handle" which has fallen into the wrong hands, elite agent Orson Fortune (Statham) and hacker Sarah (Aubrey Plaza) infiltrate the Ukrainian mafia, blackmail a movie star (Josh Hartnett) and go head-to-head with a billionaire arms dealer (a cockney Hugh Grant) to avert disaster. ★★★

The Guide

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
Seven, Saturday, 5.30pm

A Friday-night fixture for the past 20 years, there's now a double dose of home inspiration as this lifestyle staple branches out to Saturday evenings as well. That means twice as many renter-friendly DIYs, tasty tricks to try in the kitchen, pet care solutions and landscaping ideas. Host Johanna Griggs says the new schedule means "more house calls than Dr Harry" as the team showcase extraordinary properties and gardens from around the country. In this instalment, Adam Dovile gets a sneak peek at the Good Friday Appeal house ahead of its April 3 auction. Also, Charlie Albone and Juliet Love (both pictured) enlist the help of Dr Harry Cooper for a pet project, and Colin Fassnidge whips up homemade pasties.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Mum's the word: Craig Roberts, Mark Heap and Dawn French in Can You Keep a Secret?

CAN YOU KEEP A SECRET?
ABC TV, Sunday, 8.20pm

Comedy legend Dawn French (The Vicar of Dibley) and the wonderfully weird Mark Heap (Friday Night Dinner) team up for this twisted sitcom about a couple who profit from a life insurance payout after one of them is mistakenly declared dead. Ostensibly late husband William (Heap) is now confined to the family's attic while his indomitable wife Debbie (French) enjoys meetings with the local "widows club". Son Harry (Craig Roberts) has been deep in mourning, but is soon brought in on the ruse against his will. With a police officer wife (Mandip Gill) who he definitely can't confide in, Harry is caught in a war between his own conscience and a lucrative cut of the fraudulent fortune.

9-1-1
Seven, Monday, 7.10pm

From a billionaire caught in the mouth of a humpback whale to an outer-space emergency and a giant Jack-o'-Lantern, the ninth season of this first responder drama seems to have given up entirely on believability. Monday's instalment, titled "War", changes all that. Bringing the team back down to earth, the heavy-hitting hour deals with internal conflict at Station 118. Following his dismissal of Hen (Aisha Hinds), Chimney (Kenneth Choi) comes under fire from Athena (Angela Bassett, pictured) and Buck (Oliver Stark), but Eddie (Ryan Guzman) supports his captain's decision. Meanwhile, in dispatch, Maddie (Jennifer Love Hewitt) is unsettled by a new AI assistant programmed to use her voice.

THE MATTER OF FACTS
ABC TV, Tuesday, 8.30pm

On the 1949 release of George Orwell's dystopian classic novel 1984, the notion of rewriting history and events to fit political narratives was a daunting prospect to most of the Western world. In 2026, an era rife with social media trolls, AI chatbots and international campaigns designed to undermine our faith in facts, Orwell's world is no longer far from our reality. Award-winning journalist Hamish Macdonald (pictured) wades into the fray in this compelling three-part documentary, heading to the frontline of the global information wars to explore how disinformation travels through the digital ecosystem. Tuesday's premiere examines the effects of modern technology on our brains and belief systems.

CROCODILE ROCK

DEADLOCH
Streaming from Friday, Prime Video

This offbeat crime comedy heats up faster than a bitumen road in summer as it relocates from chilly Tasmania to the tropical Top End for a second season of murder and mayhem.

After wowing viewers and critics alike with its quirky debut instalment, Prime Video's word-of-mouth global hit turns its attention to a new baffling mystery full of twists and turns.

Co-creators Kate McCartney and Kate McLennan once again expertly walk the tightrope between gripping suspense and laugh-out-loud hilarity as mismatched detectives Dulcie Collins (Kate Box) and Eddie Redcliffe (Madeleine Sami) find themselves in Darwin to investigate the death of Eddie's former policing partner, Bushy.

However, when a body part is found inside a washed-up crocodile near the remote town of Barra Creek, the savvy sleuths soon embark on a separate mission to find out how the unidentified victim met his grisly demise.

Nina Oyama returns as awkward forensic expert Abby Matsuda, alongside Alicia Gardiner as Dulcie's devoted wife, Cath York.

In a casting coup, Luke Hemsworth (Westworld) joins the eclectic ensemble as charismatic tour operator Jason Wade.

This six-part chapter also features other familiar faces such as Shari Sebbens, Nikki Britton, Genevieve Morris and Steve Bisley.

Playing out like a heady mix of Midsomer Murders and Killing Eve, this genre-bending follow-up will grip you tighter than a hungry croc in a death roll. – Travis Lewis

Dream team: Deadloch's savvy sleuths Eddie (Madeleine Sami) and Dulcie (Kate Box).

PEAKY BLINDERS: THE IMMORTAL MAN
Streaming from Friday, Netflix

Cillian Murphy reprises his role as notorious gang leader Tommy Shelby in this gritty continuation of the captivating crime saga Peaky Blinders. Set against the backdrop of World War II, the film follows Shelby as he tries to seize back control of the brutal Birmingham crew he abandoned years ago, which is now being run by his son Duke (Barry Keoghan, pictured, left, with Murphy). Dune star Rebecca Ferguson also joins the stellar cast.

THE OTHER BENNET SISTER
Streaming, Binge

Bridgerton fans will find a perfect match with this lavish period drama. Based on Janice Hadlow's 2020 novel, the 10-part series reimagines Jane Austen's literary classic Pride and Prejudice from the perspective of bookish middle sister Mary (Ella Bruccoleri, Call the Midwife) as she embarks on a journey of self-discovery. Richard E. Grant and Ruth Jones (both pictured with Bruccoleri) co-star as Mary's discerning parents.

IMPERFECT WOMEN
Streaming, Apple TV

An A-list cast spearheads this psychological thriller centred on the demise of a decades-long friendship. Elisabeth Moss, Kerry Washington (both pictured) and Kate Mara play the pals in question, whose lives are thrown into turmoil when one of them turns up dead. The stylish mystery will satiate fans awaiting the third season of Big Little Lies.

HONEY DON'T!
Streaming, Binge

Margaret Qualley (pictured) cements her leading-lady status in the second entry of a planned trilogy of queer capers from husband-and-wife filmmakers Ethan Coen and Tricia Cooke (Drive-Away Dolls). The darkly comic neo-noir follows private investigator Honey (Qualley) as she probes a suspicious death linked to a charismatic cult leader (Chris Evans).

DO YOU HAVE ADHD?
Streaming, Stan

With more Australians than ever being diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, questions about how to manage the complex neurodivergent condition are at an all-time high. Dr Clare Bailey Mosley and Dr Karan Rajan (both pictured) separate fact from fiction as they explore the challenges faced by children and adults living with ADHD.

Time to rediscover Kirra

By Kylie Mitchell-Smith, Travel Writer/podcaster
Www.travellingsenorita.com

THERE'S something about Kirra, from the pristine open beach to the laidback community vibe to the latest restaurant openings - it's a popular seaside destination.

Back in the day the Southern Gold Coast neighbourhood was known for its iconic surf break and swinging '60s Hockey Pokey dance, where beach days blended into balmy nights.

Kirra has found its groove again, from the comeback of the famous right hand point break to the reimagined Kirra Beach Hotel - a local's favourite.

We check into the Kirra Point Holiday Apartments, set high above the Kirra Beach Hotel. The expansive hotel style apartments are styled in neutral tones, with contemporary architectural lines and coastal touches that feature throughout.

We stay in a two-bedroom ocean front apartment, that captures stunning views across to Surfers Paradise. Take your pick from a one-, two- or three-bedroom layout, or maybe a penthouse with infinity pool is more your thing.

The Kirra Beach hotel on ground level is abuzz any day of the week, offering good pub style food in a relaxed, open-air venue, looking out to the sea. Keeping the locals happy, there's a reimagined front bar, bottle shop and cafe.

Above the hotel is the super stylish and popular Kirra Beach House, billed as a seaside dining and drinking venue with DJs and sunsets - it's all the rage. There's a sumptuous menu designed to share packed with salad bowls, pizzas and fresh seafood, we enjoy in the outside cabanas with the dreamiest views across the point.

Walking along the esplanade, we pass the retro surf club, it's like stepping back in time, where locals enjoy a coldie on the deck and counter meals are served in a modest dining area. It's where old meets new, as next door is the popular Siblings restaurant in the reimagined pizza hut space.

The restaurant has been pumping since its opening, with good service, delicious food and cocktails served by the sea - it's a recipe for success.

We wander just north of the surf club, to the dining and cafe precinct, stopping off for dinner at Hanks (Siblings' baby brother).

Decked out in Mediterranean style with a menu to suit, we sip on a spritz and enjoy a share plate menu of local prawn linguini and burrata with caramelised honey and fennel seed.

We rise as the sun rises and take an early morning dip across the road, with a takeaway coffee and toasted Vegemite scroll in hand from Made cafe down below.

Beach walks are the go on the Southern Gold Coast. (Kylie Mitchell-Smith)

Lunch is served at Billy Chow, a Pan-Asian beauty by the sea. The food is simply delicious, from freshly made mushroom dumplings to fried rice with a twist.

Next door at Agave Rosa, it's all about tacos and margaritas, with a happy hour that makes us happy. Kirra has nailed its global food offering, with an array of restaurants, bars and cafes on offer, and word on the street is there's more to come, as stage two of Kirra Point begins.

For a spot of shopping, we head to Cotton Living for homewares, Love Street Store for local threads and Gypsy and the Muse for coastal clothes and jewellery. For relaxation, we book a recovery session at Native State, a luxury bathhouse and studio gym in the Kirra Surf building to the north.

Kirra Beach offers that quintessential coastal stay on the southern Gold Coast, with beach walks to Bilinga and Tugun to the north and Coolangatta and Rainbow Bay to the South.

Helping prisoners find work

TERRITORIANS in custody or under Community Corrections who will reside in the Territory upon release will be supported to gain employment through a new Ready to Work program.

The program will engage with key industries including construction, mining, manufacturing, the service sector and agribusiness, with participants expected to secure roles such as labourers, factory workers, traffic controllers, plant operators, cleaners and pick packers.

In a move aimed at reducing reoffending and strengthening the Northern Territory workforce, the NT Government is offering mentoring and training through the program for men and women over the age of 18 who are within 12 months of release, or currently on remand or bail.

Ready to Work will support prisoners to build skills and secure stable employment, with participants in Darwin expected to be welcomed in March and program delivery to begin in Alice Springs in July.

The program will be delivered by Workskil Australia and aims to provide guidance to prisoners to address complex challenges and build the confidence to remain on a productive path upon release.

Workskil Australia chief executive officer Nicole Dwyer said the organisation was proud to launch the program in partnership with the Department of Corrections.

PROGRAM: Corrections Commissioner Matthew Varley, Workskil Australia CEO Nicole Dwyer and Minister for Corrections Gerard Maley.

"We're working closely with the Department of Corrections, Aboriginal Community Controlled Organisations and the local community to deliver a program tailored to the unique needs of Territorians," Ms Dwyer said.

"Our person-centred approach is backed by years of experience in the justice space, with genuine local knowledge and community input to implement strategies that work for Territorians.

"We look forward to building strong connections with local employers and service providers to help make a meaningful difference in the lives of participants, strengthening communities and boosting local economies."

The program will run as a two-year trial, with participation capped at 350 people in the first year and increasing to 450 in the second year, supporting up to 800 participants Territory-wide.

Mentors will work individually with each participant to set goals focused on gaining and sustaining employment, and participants will continue to receive support after their release.

Deputy Commissioner Custodial Operations Kym McKay said Ready to Work was not just about training, but about stable employment, long-term support and safer communities.

"It's a complete employment-focused transition system that starts in custody, continues well beyond release, and brings together employers, community organisations and government to give people a genuine chance to succeed," Deputy Commissioner McKay said.

Territory to establish first ever youth foyer working group

By Gladys Barreta

A Youth Foyer in the Northern Territory may soon become a reality, addressing long-standing calls for youth-focused housing that supports young Territorians to gain independence, pursue education or employment, and work towards their aspirations.

After being identified as a top priority in Alice Springs seven years ago, the Northern Territory has now established its first Youth Foyer working group.

The newly formed NT FoyerInvest Working Group aims to support young Territorians into housing, education and employment, with a longer-term plan to establish Youth Foyers across the Territory over the next 10 years.

The group will drive coordinated advocacy for Youth Foyers in the Northern Territory and has been jointly established by NT Shelter and Anglicare NT.

Youth Foyers provide people aged 16 to 24 with a safe and stable home, integrated with education, employment and life skills support for up to two years. The Northern Territory is currently the only jurisdiction in Australia without a Youth Foyer.

HOMES: NT Shelter chief executive officer, Annie Taylor who says the establishment of the NT FoyerInvest Working Group is an important step forward.

The NT FoyerInvest Working Group brings together Lhere Artepe Aboriginal Corporation, Rirratjingu Aboriginal Corporation, Yilli Rreung Housing Aboriginal Corporation, Jawoyn Association, the Foyer Foundation, Anglicare NT and NT Shelter.

By exploring how to deliver the Territory's first Youth Foyer, the organisations will work together to identify funding opportunities and build the partnerships needed to make the model a reality.

NT Shelter chief executive officer, Annie Taylor said the Northern Territory had historically been funded by the Federal Government based on population rather than need.

She said this had disadvantaged the Territory, meaning that despite high levels of homelessness and housing demand, proven models such as Youth Foyers and Common Ground had not been delivered.

"The NT has the highest rates of youth homelessness in the country and yet we're not providing young people with sufficient shelter and housing options," Ms Taylor said.

"The Foyer approach is one such option that needs to be available to young people who are ready for independence.

"In 2023, NT Shelter and the Office of the Children's Commissioner spoke to young people in Alice Springs about homelessness and we heard they wanted more youth-specific accommodation options.

"We need to listen to young people, hear their needs and meet them. The current reality is that there is insufficient housing to meet that need."

Anglicare NT chief executive officer, Craig Kelly said collaboration was central to the initiative.

"This is about long-term, coordinated planning for the Territory. We are building a shared vision that reflects the unique context of the NT," Mr Kelly said.

The working group will complement national advocacy efforts led by the Foyer Foundation while developing a Territory-specific approach that responds to local needs.

"Part of finding effective solutions to a youth homelessness crisis that predominantly impacts Aboriginal young people is adapting an approach that works elsewhere to the NT context," said Elizabeth Stubbs, acting chief executive officer of Yilli Rreung Housing Aboriginal Corporation.

"That's what this working group must prioritise."

Full house for IWD breakfast

By Phil Williams

MADIGAN'S Function Room at the Desert Park was filled to almost overflowing for the International Women's Day Breakfast on 6 March.

Around 90 people of all ages were on hand to listen to Wiradyuri and Greek woman, and accomplished journalist and broadcaster Rae Johnston speak at the 'Give To Gain' themed breakfast.

As a fundraiser for the Women's Museum of Australia, the event included a silent auction of more than a dozen donated items including gift hampers, jewellery and artworks.

HOROSCOPE by Lilith

Week beginning 22nd March

Your week ahead

Saturn represents material reality's rules, constructs and consequences. Neptune is the invisible realm of movement, frequencies, connection. Their link-up in Aries potentially introduces a new sense of spiritual responsibility to our ever-evolving world…

ARIES
(Mar 21 - Apr 19)

The celestial supercharges of two inner and three outer planets in your birthday sign brings this month to a beautiful conclusion with the news you want to hear as you start your new astroyear: that the cosmic force is with you for this momentous life cycle in more ways than you can possibly imagine.
Best day:
Tuesday 24 March

TAURUS
(Apr 20 - May 20)

It's natural to resist the uncertainty of territory where we don't know what to expect: to want to stay with comforting familiarity. Which means we don't get to grow, so this week's astral energetics ask: where might you step into the new and unknown, with all its risks and opportunities?
Best day:
Friday 27 March

GEMINI
(May 21 - Jun 20)

Now your planet guide, Mercury, is back on track, communication glitches ease, but it would be wise to keep in mind the lessons of recent retrogrades re the pitfalls of making hasty decisions. Make progress this week with a renewed resolve not to jump ahead of yourself and/or act on assumptions.
Best day:
Sunday 22 March

CANCER
(Jun 21 - Jul 22)

Dramas subside and recriminations give way to reconciliation with Mercury on the move again. And as this week blasts full steam ahead on implementing those brilliant ideas and strategic plans, remember to keep taking personal time out, even gear down to a less hectic, more manageable pace.
Best day:
Wednesday 25 March

LEO
(Jul 23 - Aug 22)

In physical astrology, Leo is believed to rule the heart, considered the source of courage. Lions are also the zodiac's entertainers, and since it takes courage to share yourself, you might try encouraging someone to share a song, dance, joke, story, idea or just how they're feeling this week.
Best day:
Saturday 28 March

(Aug 23 - Sep 22)

With Mercury's recent retrograde wrapping up unfinished business, a welcome measure of clarity returns as its forward progress says pay attention to what physical signals are trying to tell you. If you're feeling fired and inspired, and that's likely, don't forget to make those appointments you've been putting off.
Best day:
Thursday 26 March

LIBRA
(Sep 23 - Oct 22)

This week invites your practical talents to the fore, though letting the messy, meaningful conversations happen mightn't be all easy going. If things start going haywire, don't stress. Just take quiet time out to check your inner compass for the courage and elegant solutions which are Libra's forte after all.
Best day:
Tuesday 24 March

SCORPIO
(Oct 23 - Nov 21)

This week's planetary ignition integrates what has already been set in motion and fuels ongoing engagement in working towards personal and professional goals. ## SAGITTARIUS
(Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Best day:
Saturday 28 March

CAPRICORN
(Dec 22 - Jan 19)

Capricorn's an earth sign and, as farmers know, fields need to lie fallow so nutrients can be replenished. Humans also need to let our energetic field reset and recover its natural rhythm. What areas of your life might benefit from a revamp, a renovation, a rebuild… or just some rest and relaxation?
Best day:
Wednesday 25 March

AQUARIUS
(Jan 20 - Feb 18)

This week's assertive energy supports you in forging a meaningful path through attention-fracturing distractions and pseudo infotainment, and sticking to it. Not easy, but necessary.
Best day:
Monday 23 March

PISCES
(Feb 19 - Mar 20)

Exhausted by things that used to excite you? Then don't bring those old stories into the new astrological year. Persuasive Mercury and finger-in-the-socket Mars in Pisces are amping your determination to see old things with new eyes. Although conditions do apply, which are: test the waters before diving in.
Best day:
Thursday 26 March

Gosse Street a tribute

By Phil Williams

GOSSE Street in East Side is a tribute to pioneer and explorer, William Gosse Jr.

He was born in Hoddleston, England on 21 December 1897 and was the second son of Dr William Gosse and his wife Agnes.

Dr Gosse with his wife and six children emigrated to Adelaide in 1850, where Dr Gosse became a prominent figure.

On leaving school, Gosse Jr joined the Surveyor General's Department and became a qualified surveyor.

With the completion of the Overland Telegraph Line (OTL) in 1872, exploration parties were sent out for further exploration of the area.

Gosse was invited to explore the country around the Alice Springs Telegraph Station (ASTS) and to lead an expedition from there to Perth.

The party consisted of Gosse, Edwin Berry as 2IC, Gosse's brother and collector, Henry, also known as Harry, Patrick Nilan, Henry Winnall, three Afghans and an Aboriginal boy from The Peake.

The expedition, equipped with horses, wagons and camels, originally set out from Adelaide in September 1872 and reached the ASTS in December, six days after Major Peter Egerton-Warburton's party who were also heading to Perth.

Both parties progress was hampered by lack of water as known soaks were reported as being dry.

The explorers headed north to the present Aileron Station then south west to Mt Conner, which was named by Gosse.

On 18 July 1873, Gosse saw what he believed to be giant tor (a prominent rock or heap of rocks) and investigated it further.

Tor was also a common term in the South West of England used at the time to describe hills or ranges.

Gosse soon realised what he was seeing was a large monolith and named it Ayers Rock, after the eighth South Australian premier, Sir Henry Ayers.

MAIL: William Gosse featured on a 1976 postage stamp series honouring Australian explorers.

SURVEYOR: A circa 1875 portrait of pioneering Central Australian explorer, William Christie Gosse who named Ayers Rock. (STATE LIBRARY OF SA/ PORTRAIT COLLECTION: B 5941)

The next day, Gosse and one of the Afghans in the party, Kamaran, climbed to the top of the giant landmark, then returned to the base camp before the entire party ventured west to the Olgas.

Gosse was the first known non-Aboriginal person to visit and climb Ayers Rock on July 19, 1873.

On a previous expedition, Ernest Giles had seen the rock from a distance, but left it unnamed.

Gosse attempted to explore further west but it was in the heat of summer and he decided it was too dry, so the party turned back, reaching Charlotte Waters Telegraph Station, located near the SA/NT border, on 19 December, 1873, and from there, returned to Adelaide.

SA Surveyor-General, George Goyder said although the journey did not reach Perth, Gosse's accurately kept daily diary, journals and records gave the Lands Office details more than 155.000 square km of country and enabled places named by Giles to be mapped accurately.

On returning to Adelaide, Gosse was made deputy to Goyder.

He became ill and died on 12 August 1881, aged just 38 and was survived by his wife and their two sons and daughter.

Gosse Street in Alice Springs was gazetted on 17 September 1952.

Gosse Crescent in Yulara is also a tribute to the explorer and was gazetted on 27 June 1984.

The landmark west of Alice Springs known as Gosse's Bluff was named after Henry Gosse by Ernest Giles in September 1872.

In 1976, Gosse was honoured with a postage stamp by Australia Post as part of a set of six Australian Explorers.

Going, going, gone: Rat bait for 'licensed users' only

By Phil Williams

GRAZIERS and domestic users are likely to be affected by a ban on readily available mouse and rat baits which will only be sold to licensed users, such as pest controllers.

The new ruling will mean that products such as Ratsak, currently available over the counter at hardware stores and supermarkets, will be removed from general sale.

The Australian Pesticides and Veterinary Medicines Authority (APVMA) has certified that it is in the public interest for chemical products containing any second-generation anticoagulant rodenticides (SGARS) to be declared restricted chemical products (RCPs).

After a detailed review and finalising risk assessments on anticoagulant rodenticides, the APVMA is proposing substantial changes to products in this category to protect the safety of people, and the environment, especially native birds and mammals.

Research over a number of years has found the presence of bait residue in dead or sick owls and other animals that feed on mice and rats.

Declaring SGARs as RCPs will enable tighter controls on their purchase and use, including restricting access to individuals who meet specific training and licensing requirements.

GOING: Retail sales of rat baits are likely to end under government regulations. (Phil Williams: 540824)

If the certification is accepted by the Australian Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry (DAFF), the APVMA, together with state and territory control-of-use authorities, will consider how training and licensing requirements could be implemented.

The certification follows the APVMA's proposed decision in December last year to suspend SGAR products.

Following that decision, a targeted 6-week consultation period with product holders and state and territory authorities commenced.

During the consultation period, state and territory chemical coordinators advised that declaring SGARs as RCPs would provide the most robust legal framework for ensuring access can be restricted to licensed and authorised users in a nationally consistent manner.

In parallel with the RCP certification, the APVMA has also announced that the registration of all products containing SGARs will be suspended for one year from 24 March this year.

The suspension will allow stricter controls on the use of SGARs to be implemented quickly, while broader measures to support the potential RCP declaration are progressed.

Beginning last December through to the end of January of this year, the APVMA consulted with state and territory authorities and holders of affected products on the proposed suspension. Fourteen submissions were received.

After reviewing the submissions, the APVMA's risk conclusions remain unchanged.

The APVMA had determined that the current use of SGAR products presents unacceptable risks to non-target animals, including native wildlife, pets and livestock.

During the suspension period, SGAR products may only be supplied or used in accordance with the instructions published in the APVMA Gazette No 5, released on Tuesday 10 March, or as specified in the notice issued to each product holder.

These instructions are enforceable under state and territory legislation and apply nationally.

The suspension introduces strong risk mitigation measures to protect native fauna, pets and livestock while the APVMA finalises its full regulatory consideration of first- and second-generation anticoagulant rodenticides.

The proposed decisions include a range of restrictions on how and where all anticoagulant rodenticide products, including first-generation products, may be used.

It means products containing the identified substances would require a specific license to legally purchase.

The APVMA has also proposed cancelling specific products that pose an unacceptable risk.

Already some councils across Australia have implemented bans on commercially available baits.

One of the first councils to end the use of SGARs was the Shire of Augusta-Margaret River in 2020.

It was all over in a flash...

By Phil Williams

IN a 'blink and you miss it' encounter, Federal dispatched a toothless Tiger outfit in the B Grade T20 cricket match at Albrecht Oval on 7 March.

Feds had the game wrapped up with both innings complete in just 11 overs.

Batting first after losing the toss, and with two players short, Tigers had their back against the wall before a delivery was bowled.

None of the Tigers batters reached double figures with Vice Captain, Manikandan Gopalan top scoring with just six runs from a total of 15.

The first Tigers wicket fell in the third over.

For the next six overs, the innings became a constant procession to and from the middle for the Tigers batters.

The collapse started when the first wicket fell with score at 4, then two more at 5 and 9.

That was followed by three dismissals while the total hovered on 13 before the innings was wrapped up with the last two falling at 14 and 15 in just 8.2 overs

Ariki Lowe did most of the damage for Feds finishing with 4/9 from his four over spell.

Menuke Sampath Jasin Kandage and Deepinder Singh set about finishing off the Tigers.

The opening pair equalled the target in 2.3 overs, before Singh sent the ball to the fence to mercifully put an end to the rout.

Including the innings break, the result was determined in little more than an hour.

Final score Feds 0/19. Tigers 8/15

Both sides completed their full complement of overs in the other B Grade match at Traeger Park between Wests and Rovers Blue.

Rovers set the target after winning the toss finishing with 8/112 which proved too many for Wests 9/88.

The two A Grade Games were both close matches.

Wests 9/89 from 19 overs were beaten by Rovers 6/90 from 16 overs while Tigers made 8/104 after batting first against Federal who were all out for 92 from 19.3 overs.

The four C Grade games saw West Red 10/75 from 17.2 overs stumble to Rovers Blue, 5/78 off 19.1 overs.

Feds White batted second in their encounter with Tigers Blue.

Chasing a target of 106 for the loss of nine wickets, Feds only managed to be 9/82 at the completion of their 20 overs.

Rovers Gold set a small target of 8/59 for West Black to chase in their encounter.

West easily surpassed the Rovers score to finish with 3/60 from 11.1 overs.

The final game between Feds Red and Tigers Orange at Head Street was a high scoring contest.

Tigers 5/141 proved too much for Feds 10/136.

Doubles champs emerge

By Phil Williams

IT was a packed bowling green as close to 30 players turned out for the start of the Alice Springs club championships on March 7.

With no surrounding clubs to play against, the highlight for local bowlers is the series of club championship events.

The club championships are highly coveted, with the level of competition rising as players vie for the trophy and recognition of a well played event.

Opening the competition, the pairs events were held on the weekend of March 7 and 8, with nine men's teams and four in the ladies competition all seeking doubles glory.

In stark contrast to the tough and heavy greens of the previous few weeks, due to the wet weather, conditions were near perfect with a fast and true track taking some regular players a little time to adjust.

After a full weekend of bowling, the final matches came down to a last end thriller in both sides of the competition.

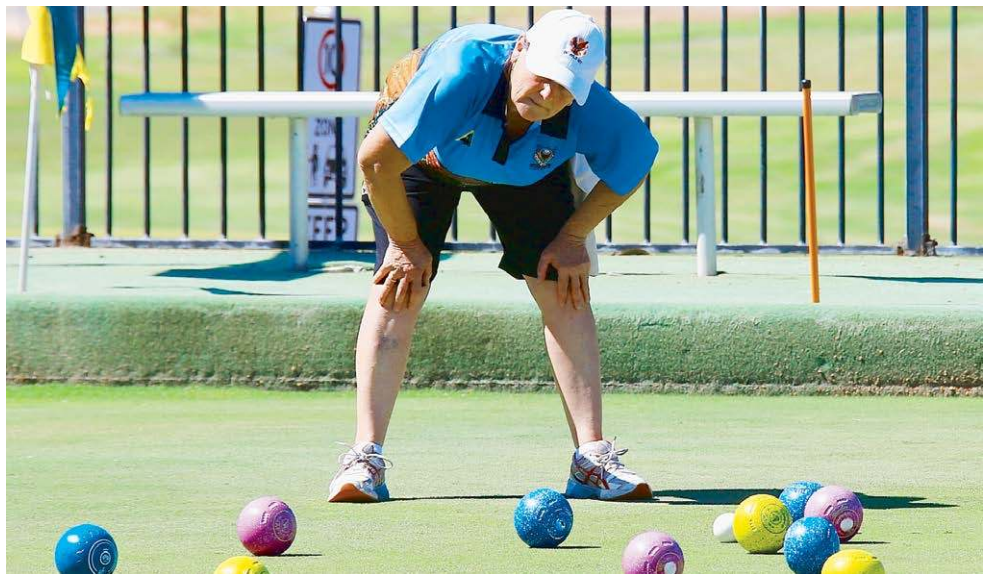

Pat Coburn and Phil Ryan eventually held on to defeat Dave Gould and Bruce Fyfe by two shots to take the Men's title.

In the Ladies, the returning Vicki Howie, who was a late a call up after an extended break, showed she hadn't lost any of her class by teaming with Bernice Bristow to defeat Katherine O'Donoghue and Yvonne Driscoll by two shots to claim the Ladies' crown.

Adding more importance to the matches, each championship counts towards points for the overall club champion crown, also another coveted title demonstrating a high performing season.

The club's Singles Championship will be held this weekend, 21 and 22 March.

The various match ups will be a good indication of individual form with a number of players travelling to Darwin for the NT State Championships in early April.

Holton elbows out Armstead

By Phil Williams

AFTER the recent rain, the track conditions were near perfect at Ilparpa for Round 2 of the Costello Cattle Company Motorcross Series.

With 33 entries across eight classes, the small fields made for some tight racing throughout the day.

Noah Holton and Robbie Armstead were separated by very little across their series of races in the top level MX1 Pro Open class.

The pair constantly battled for the lead frequently swapping positions during their heats.

Holton managed to keep Armstead at bay to come out on top with Austin Shaw completing the top three.

Holton backed up in the MX2 Pro Lites and didn't have it go his way after battling with Jaka Harris throughout the heats.

Harris took the points with Holton second ahead of Zoran Elliott while Chase Wilkinson and Stephanie Willis were the top two across the Clubman class.

Zoran Elliott made up for his third placing in Pro Lites by taking the Masters win ahead of Allan Hildebrant and William Willis who was consistently flying high off some of the bigger jumps as he pushed hard to stay in touch with the leaders.

The 125/250 combined Junior Lites saw some close racing with Angus Ramsay taking the win ahead of Jake Cole and Byron Ritchie.

Ramsay backed up to also claim the top spot in the 85cc junior class ahead of Tyler Hildebrandt and Brodie Orr.

Logan Chapman Nicol was on a charge, blitzing the field by a huge margin in the 65cc class, and went on to finish on top ahead of Joshua Taylor and Oaklyn Ling

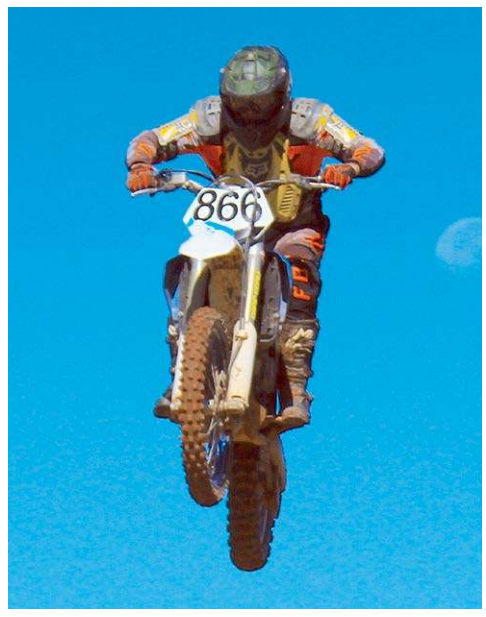

The Division 2 50cc junior points went to Rex Wark with Oaklyn Ling filling second, and Kurtis Taylor completing the podium.

The club is seeking volunteers for flagging and scoring roles for the next round of the series on 29 March at the Ilparpa track.

EFFORT: Braxton Ranking putting in a big effort in a 50cc Div 2 race.

MASTER: William Willis with a setting moon behind him looks for a landing spot.

ATTACK: Breanna Chapman Nicol attacks a set of whoops mid wy through a lap.

BALANCE: Archie Fraser goes through a tight corner on the back sector of the track.

It's unfinished business

By Phil Williams

AN Australian motorsport icon will again be a starter in this year's milestone 50th anniversary Finke Desert Race (FDR) in June.

Craig Lowndes, the seven-time Bathurst 1000 winner says he has unfinished business after a suspension failure destroyed his first attempt at conquering Finke in 2024.

After making it to Finke, the return leg proved too much for the Chevrolet Silverado and Lowndes was stranded less than 40km from the start of the second day while leading the production class.

At the time he had commanding four-minute lead in the class after setting a new record for the run to Finke the previous day.

"After my first crack at the event in 2024 I was blown away by just how demanding the race is on driver, team and vehicle," he said.

"So we're heading back with the team from Rampex with the Supercheap Auto Racing (SCAR) Silverado and a goal of taking out the Production 4WD class."

Lowndes will again be partnered by experienced rally co-driver Dale Moscatt with factory support and technicians from General Motors Australia and New Zealand working with off-road motorsport engineering and race team Rampex to have the SCAR Silverado battle ready for the event.

Rampex prepared the Silverado for Lowndes' last attempt at the FDR and have vast experience in motor-racing stemming back to Formula 1, Indycar and Australian V8 Supercars.

FDR President Antony Yoffa said having Lowndes returning would provide a great spectacle for spectators.

"It is exciting for both fans and competitors to have Craig Lowndes back at our event in a Chevrolet Silverado with the iconic backing of Supercheap Auto Racing," he said.

STAR: Craig Lowndes' run came to an end with suspension failure on the return leg from Finke in 2024. (Phil Williams: 413675)

"As one of the world's most difficult off-road races, having drivers of Craig Lowndes' calibre take on the challenge of the Tatts FDR always makes for a great spectacle, especially for the 50th edition.

"The event is also excited to welcome Supercheap Auto as an event sponsor to help us celebrate 50 years of Finke."

The new car, with striking red livery, was unveiled last week before a large crowd at the National 4x4 Show in Brisbane.

"We're taking our motorsport commitment to the world of off road racing, and to have an event like the FDR to showcase what the Silverado ZR2 is capable of, with our longtime ambassador Craig Lowndes behind the wheel, is something we're extremely excited about," Chris Payne, General Manager Marketing Aftersales & Motorsport GM Australia and New Zealand, said.

The 50th Tatts Finke Desert Race will run from Friday 5 June to Monday 8 June. For more information and tickets visit finkedesertrace.com.au
