Rhoda's gift shines bright at Parrtjima

By Phil Williams

ALICE Springs came out in force to celebrate the opening night of Parrtjima.

The perfect evening brought thousands to the Desert Park, with crowds immersing themselves in the festival of light.

Entirely curated by the late Rhoda Roberts AO, who passed away just weeks before this year's festival, it is her final gift to Central Australia, and the world.

The Ranges Light Show drew gasps of wonder from people in the packed stands as it lit up the West MacDonnell Ranges.

Saving water

A new irrigation guide that aims to help residents and businesses in Central Australia use water more efficiently launches this weekend.

The Central Australia Irrigation User Guide, developed through the Living Water Smart program, will launch at the East Side Community Garden in Alice Springs. The guide is designed to help people reduce their water bills and strengthen water supply security.

It provides practical advice on irrigation system design, drip irrigation, soil improvement, and plant selection, tailored to the arid climate of the region.

Powering up

By Phil Williams

A remote community now has more reliable power with the installation of a new standby generator.

Ali Curung, which receives its main power supply through a 170km high-voltage line, has just received the new generator to take the pressure off during outages.

The $1.35 million generator will boost power reliability, support residents, businesses, the school and health clinic, and meet modern safety standards.

The project is part of the NT government's efforts to improve critical infrastructure and provide secure, reliable electricity in remote communities.

Boost for nursing

By Phil Williams

PROSPECTIVE health professionals will be able to complete a Diploma of Nursing through a local education provider under a new program launched by the NT Government.

The new program focuses on nurses and midwives and allows them to complete healthcare work experience two days a week over 18 months.

Health Minister Steve Edgington said the program aimed to grow the Territory's Aboriginal nursing and midwifery workforce to enable high-quality care across all regions.

The program is designed to provide participants with the opportunity to succeed as future enrolled nurses, working within their own communities.

In the first year of the program, seven participants from various regions, including Alice Springs and the Tiwi Islands, are taking part.

During their training, the students are guided and supervised by registered nurses, learning a range of skills, including maintaining a safe environment, assisting patients with personal care, and undertaking specific client observations.

NT Health is also collaborating with Indigenous Allied Health Australia (IAHA) to deliver culturally secure mentoring and wraparound support for the students, aiming to improve course completion and retention.

OH WHAT A FEELING

Awareness journey

By Gladys Barreta

ALICE Springs T1D Support Group member Debbie Page has spent more than 30 years raising awareness about Type 1 diabetes, following her husband Kym's diagnosis in his mid-30s.

Ms Page said Type 1 diabetes was often misunderstood, particularly in Central Australia where rates of Type 2 diabetes are high.

"T1D is commonly known as juvenile diabetes, as it is often diagnosed in young children around 2-4 years of age and can run in families," she said.

"However, it can also be diagnosed later in life, as was the case for our family.

"We were expecting our fourth child when Kym was diagnosed, and we then became a Type 1 diabetes family.

"It wasn't until our third son Darcy was in his early 20s that he was also diagnosed."

Ms Page said having a child diagnosed with the condition was one of the family's greatest concerns.

"To be honest, having a child diagnosed with T1D was our greatest fear.

"Fortunately, I was already involved in raising awareness and funds to ultimately find a cure, which helped ease the burden slightly with awareness and hope," she said.

"For me personally, I will always be involved in diabetes awareness and fundraising, as this is now part of our family's life."

She said misconceptions about the condition could lead to unfair judgement.

"This misunderstanding can sometimes lead to families with T1D, which is an autoimmune disease, being unfairly judged as having a 'lifestyle disease,' she said.

"There is absolutely nothing people with T1D could have done to prevent their diagnosis."

Ms Page said community support played an important role in raising awareness and supporting those living with the condition.

"By supporting events like the Breakthrough T1D One Walk, the community can help acknowledge the daily battle people face until a cure is found."

Community unites to raise awareness

By Gladys Barreta

THE Alice Springs community will come together to show support and recognise the daily challenges faced by people living with Type 1 diabetes through a family-friendly walk.

The Breakthrough T1D One Walk, to be held on 18 April, invites everyone to take part in a 2km or 4km loop along the Todd River bike path.

The walk aims to foster a sense of unity and provide a platform for those living with the condition to connect, share experiences and draw inspiration from others who are not letting diabetes define their lives.

People living with Type 1 diabetes must constantly self-regulate blood glucose levels, undertake daily insulin injections or use insulin pumps, and manage ongoing medical care.

Hosted by the Alice Springs T1D Support Group, the event is expected to attract more than 100 people with Type 1 diabetes, along with families and friends, encouraging participants to "put their best foot forward"

The Alice Springs walk is one of more than 40 events being held across Australia as part of a global campaign to raise awareness, improve the lives of those living with T1D, and support life-changing research.

The event will also showcase T1D ambassadors - five local athletes preparing to take on the gruelling West Macs Monster event who will manage their condition throughout training and competition.

The walk starts at 8am, with participants meeting at 7.30am on the banks of the Todd River at the Parsons Street and Leichhardt Terrace intersection.

The free event is open to all fitness levels and welcomes children on bikes, scooters and in strollers.

The sealed path is suitable for prams and dogs.

Participants can enjoy a complimentary pancake breakfast, coffee van, face painting and lucky door prizes following the walk.

Saving water

PRACTICAL and locally tailored advice to help residents and businesses become more water savvy in the arid climate of Central Australia will be made available with the launch of the Central Australia Irrigation User Guide.

The guide, developed through the Living Water Smart program, launches on 18 April at the East Side Community Garden in Alice Springs and aims to help residents save water and reduce their water bills.

Minister for Essential Services Steve Edgington said the new guide provides clear, practical advice to help households and businesses in Central Australia use water more efficiently while keeping their gardens healthy.

"Lower water use means lower water bills for Territorians wherever you live, including in Central Australia, and it also strengthens security for our future water supply," he said.

"Water is at the heart of our unique Territory lifestyle. From backyard pools to gardens, so cutting waste and fixing leaks is essential."

In Central Australia, evaporation exceeds rainfall by more than tenfold, making irrigation efficiency critical, with gardens accounting for up to 60 per cent of household water use.

The guide provides practical advice tailored to Central Australia, including how to assess garden water usage, irrigation system design and installation, drip irrigation, controller programming and seasonal adjustments, soil improvement and mulching, water harvesting, and plant selection suited to arid conditions.

The guide will be available via the refreshed Living Water Smart website in the coming weeks.

Flood damage closes road

By Phil Williams

THE recent flooding across vast tracts of the Northern Territory continues to create huge problems for road users accessing remote areas.

In some areas, road damage is severe and extensive and could take many weeks to repair before roads can reopen.

The Plenty Highway, is one of many throughout Central Australia and the Barkly that either still remain closed, are impassable or have restricted access.

Used as shortcut to Queensland, The Plenty is a major route east and remains closed between Bonya turnoff and the Queensland border, a distance of about 160kms, due to significant road damage.

In a post to social media, the Tobermorey Roadhouse, which survived the flooding near the NT/Queensland border, said there was no confirmed timeline for repairs to the road to be completed.

"At this stage, there is no confirmed ETA for when the highway will reopen, the post said.

"We understand this can be frustrating, and we truly appreciate everyone's patience and understanding while repairs are underway,"

An alert on the NT Government's Road Report NT Facebook page, accompanied by several images showing the extent of the road damage in the area, urged road users to obey the road closure signs and not to travel on already damaged roads.

"Road closures are in place for safety and to allow repairs as soon as conditions allow, the post said.

IMPASSABLE: The damaged road surface at the approach to the Arthur River on the Plenty Highway. (Road Report NT)

"Driving on closed roads damages the road surface and keeps roads closed for longer."

The Plenty Highway from the Stuart Highway to the Bonya Turnoff remains open, although some damage exists in places.

Road Report NT advises to drive with caution due to the changing conditions of the road surface.

It is an offence under Section 11 of the Control of Roads Act 1953 to drive on a road that is temporarily closed or restricted.

Significant fines, where penalties can reach up to $10,000 for accessing closed roads or tampering with signs may be applied to drivers disobeying signage.

In addition to fines, drivers may face prosecution for reckless or dangerous driving, particularly if the action requires the deployment of emergency services for rescue.

Spectacular show lights up

By Phil Williams

A massive crowd flocked to the Desert Park for the opening night festivities of Parrtjima on 10 April, with the crowds continuing to pour in every night.

The perfect Friday evening brought out thousands of residents and visitors who immersed themselves in the kaleidoscope of colour, which was curated by the late Rhoda Roberts AO, who passed away just weeks before this year's festival.

The ceremony featured a tribute to Ms Roberts, who was the driving force behind Parrtjima for a decade, making it what it is today.

Parrtjima Cultural Advisor, and friend to Ms Roberts, Paul Ah Chee said she was not just a curator, but a friend and mentor to many people in the art world across Australia.

"First and foremost, she was a strong woman," he said.

"She was more than a curator - she was family to so many of us. She was a guiding, creative force beyond countless iconic Australian events, including Parrtjima," he said.

"She was a gifted curator, a storyteller and a cultural leader whose vision shaped this festival in many ways."

The Ranges Light Show, lasting around seven minutes, is nothing short of spectacular and drew gasps of wonder from people in the packed stands as it danced across the natural canvas of West MacDonnell Ranges.

Every evening, as the sun dips below the horizon, the precinct comes to life, transforming the desert into a totally new world, as a multitude of lighting installations begin to shine.

A number of interactive installations across the festival space drench guests in a palette of colour and sound, encouraging visitors to immerse themselves and become a part of Arrernte Country.

As well as the light displays, there are cultural workshops, artist talks and other activities for visitors to enhance their experience.

Parrtjima is a free event and continues until Sunday 19 April.

Dr Glenn Morrison

And the leader will come

WHAT is leadership? And what sort of leadership is needed for progress in Alice Springs?

Forty-five Centralians gathered to ask themselves exactly these questions at the Mercure Hotel's Gum Tree Room on the last Friday of March.

They had help. From an invited specialist in "adaptive leadership", who bravely risked an Outback leg of his Australian speaking tour.

Author Ed O'Malley is a former US politician, founder and once President of the Kansas Leadership Center, CEO of the Kansas Health Foundation, and a one-time candidate for governor of Kansas; on this last, he quips, he realised his error before it was too late.

O'Malley has an easy home-spun style. And a presenting approach both engaging and Alice-friendly.

"The big places like New York City and Los Angeles," he begins, "don't pay a lot of attention to us in Kansas; they fly over us, and we have to solve our (own) problems.

"To be in a community like Alice, (as) I have the past few days, and meet so many wonderful people who care so much about making this community a better place, is really inspiring."

That didn't mean O'Malley wasn't nervous about fronting a small town with a big identity and a long history.

"It's a little tricky to be the out-of-town person where I come from: We're always a little sceptical when somebody from out of town comes up with ideas.

"So, I just want you to know that I think my job tonight is not to suggest anything that you should do ... I think of myself as a conversation catalyst, not an expert who's coming in with answers."

True to his word, that was the role O'Malley played.

For pondering questions of leadership, for example, he floated a unique approach.

"You don't have to buy this idea, but I would encourage you to rent it for tonight: That leadership is an activity, not a position.

"If you think of leadership as an activity ... of mobilising others to make progress, you're going to have a different conversation than if you think about leadership as a position.

"And I promise, from my experience, it'll change the way this community goes forward."

From research conducted by the Kansas Leadership Centre, O'Malley claims a direct relationship between the quality and quantity of leadership in a community and the progress it makes.

Author Ed O'Malley relished his time in Alice Springs, saying he'd met many wonderful people who care about the community.

"Not the quality and quantity of people with power, the quality and quantity of people who know how to mobilise others to make progress."

Workshop participants came from all walks of Alice Springs life and represented several cultural and demographic groups.

Gathered at group tables, though changing seats throughout, participants chatted through their responses to set questions designed to unearth fresh ideas about what styles of leadership might help to 'progress' our town.

Many saw the wisdom in steering away from authoritative styles of leadership that have dominated Australian management and political circles for more than a century.

Some recognised a need for complexity, to not shy away from self-doubt, and to make sure our decision-makers were hearing not only from the loudest voices.

A type of leadership was needed that could think on multiple fronts, across cultures, yet

Ed O'Malley describes himself as a 'a conversation catalyst'. (ED O'MALLEY) remain focused and flexible.

Some expressed concern at a lack of Aboriginal participants in the group (there were two), others applauded the quite broad range of representation that was achieved.

Others borrowed from former NZ Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern to record that what leadership needed was, in Ardern's words, to be "rehumanised" and to "value empathy".

While no monumental changes for the town and its governance had been hammered out by evening's end, perhaps the gathering is best described as an 'auspicious beginning'.

Hosted by Mparntwe Alice Springs Community Foundation (which part-sponsors the Centralian Today), the workshop was called 'What leadership is needed for progress in Alice Springs?' and was held on Friday 27 March.

Given they seem to be asking all the right questions, why not join the next leadership meet at 5pm Friday 24 April, with a view to perhaps meeting the last Friday of each month.

Getting Good Stuff Done

Solar at the heart of water

By Gladys Barreta

A remote Central Australian outback farm and holiday business has turned to solar power to save water and money, leading the way for a more sustainable future in rural and remote Australia. Owners of Athelle Outback Hideaway, Anthony and Danyelle Haigh, have replaced diesel generators with solar pumps, allowing them to deliver reliable water across their 60ha property.

Located 200km north of Alice Springs, Athelle Outback Hideaway uses solar pumps to help combat temperatures that regularly climb above 40°C, with scarce rainfall, averaging just 15cm a year. The Grundfos SPE solar pump is a submersible system designed to deliver reliable water flow from bores.

Through this change, they have saved around $210,000 a year in fuel costs, avoiding the use of 100,000 litres of diesel.

The system also provides an extra 40 to 60 minutes of pumping each day, ensuring irrigation for hay crops and orchards, while maintaining a reliable water supply during extreme heat to safeguard livestock, crops and the tourism business.

Athelle Outback supports a hay farm for the NT's beef industry while also operating as a holiday park. The property had relied on older diesel generators, which were expensive and sometimes unreliable.

This resulted in costly repairs and long trips for maintenance, with equipment failure posing a direct threat to livestock, crops and essential infrastructure. The Haighs are now reaping the benefits of more efficient water solutions, reducing costs and environmental impact for the Northern Territory's agricultural industry.

Mr Haigh said the switch to solar had delivered significant savings.

"Solar just made sense for us here in the Northern Territory, especially in summer when there's plenty of sun and the highest demand for water," he said.

"The SPE pumps give us an extra 20 minutes of pumping in the morning and evening, which means we're saving money and using less fuel.

"Having that reliable water supply is critical for running a productive farm and a sustainable tourism business out here in the harsh outback conditions."

Country Director of Grundfos Australia, Rick Holland, said operating in remote environments such as Central Australia required water solutions that were reliable and energy efficient.

SUSTAINABLE: Owners of Athelle Outback Hideaway, Danyelle and Anthony Haigh.

"The technology is designed to maximise solar energy and deliver consistent performance in challenging conditions," he said.

"By working closely with our dealer network, we're able to help customers secure a dependable water supply while reducing operating costs and environmental impact."

The Getting Good Stuff Done (#GGSD) page promotes and highlights positive initiatives that support and strengthen the community.

Tourism recognition

By Gladys Barreta

AWARDS recognising tourism leaders helping shape the Northern Territory are now open for nominations, calling on individuals and operators to step forward.

The 2026 Brolga Northern Territory Tourism Awards recognise individuals, community groups, campaigns and operators who help shape the visitor experience and economy across the Territory, contributing to the success of the tourism industry.

Alice Springs Mayor Asta Hill said tourism in Central Australia was vital, supporting local jobs and backing small businesses.

“Tourism helps keep our town vibrant year-round,” Ms Hill said.

“When tourism is strong, it flows right through the community, from cafes and tour operators to artists, accommodation providers and local events.

“Our community is at its best when our tourism industry is thriving.

“The Brolga Awards are about celebrating the very best of tourism in Central Australia, the people, experiences and stories that make this place so special.

“They give our local operators the recognition they deserve and shine a spotlight on the quality of what we offer.”

Minister for Tourism and Hospitality Marie-Claire Boothby said the awards would shine a light on those whose hard work often goes unnoticed.

“There is strong national and global interest in the Territory right now and the Brolgas are another opportunity to grow that interest,” Ms Boothby said.

“Our focus is making sure our businesses benefit from that attention and see it translate into bookings and longer stays.

“As outlined in the Visitor Economy Strat-

STATUE: The Brolga Award - known as Big Bird - watches over the 2024 Gala Dinner in Alice Springs. (Phil Williams: 442766)

egy, we’re working hard to elevate the Territory’s profile and promote the wide range of products available to visitors. “Awards like the Brolgas play an important role in that, as we aim to grow the visitor economy to $3 billion and 1.7 million trips by 2032.”

Tourism Central Australia CEO Danial Rochford is yet to respond to a request for comment about the awards.

Nominations close on Wednesday, 12 August, with final submissions due on Wednesday, 9 September.

Finalists will be recognised at an awards gala on Saturday, 14 November.

Winners will go on to compete nationally as finalists in the Australian Tourism Awards in 2027.

The Territory was strongly represented at the 2025 Qantas Australian Tourism Awards in early March, with 22 national finalists competing.

Tourism Central Australia won gold in the Tourism Marketing Campaigns category at the 2025 Brolga NT Awards.

To find out more, including important dates, previous winners and how to nominate, visit the Tourism NT website.

Man ID’d

By Phil Williams

A man aged in his mid 40s and carrying no identification who died in unknown circumstances on a street in Tennant Creek has been identified.

Northern Territory Police continue the call for public assistance following the discovery of the man’s body overnight on Friday 10 April.

About 9.30pm, police on patrol along Staunton Street, near Kargaru Oval, found the man lying on the ground a short distance from the road.

Officers immediately conducted a welfare check and found him to be unresponsive.

After determining he was not breathing and had no pulse, they commenced CPR until a St John Ambulance crew attended and continued resuscitation efforts.

Despite efforts to revive him, the man was declared deceased at the scene about 10pm.

A crime scene was established and investigations are ongoing.

Early indications were that the man had no obvious signs of injury.

On Saturday afternoon, 11 April NT Police said they had identified the man, and his next of kin had been notified.

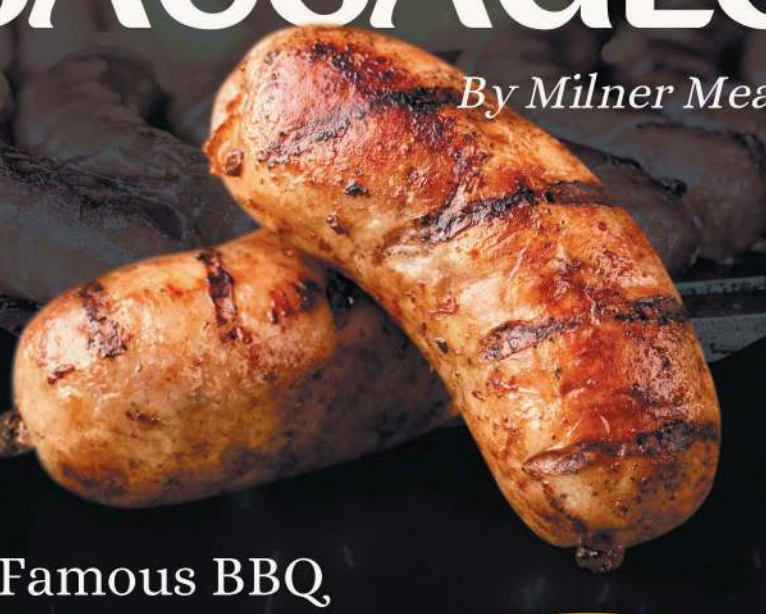

No suspicious circumstances surrounding the 45-year-old Tennant Creek man’s death have been identified.

A report will be prepared for the coroner.

Police are urging anyone who may have been in the area of Staunton Street or Kargaru Oval around the time, or who may have information that could assist, to contact police on 131 444 and quote reference number P26105368.

Massive boost for Indigenous nursing

By Phil Williams

PROSPECTIVE health professionals will be able to complete a Diploma of Nursing through a local education provider under a new program launched by the NT Government.

The new program, investing in the future of Aboriginal health professionals, focuses on nurses and midwives and allows them to complete healthcare work experience two days a week over 18 months.

Health Minister Steve Edgington said the Aboriginal Enrolled Nurse Training program supports Aboriginal school leavers with career pathways into nursing and midwifery through funded tuition, part-time employment, and mentoring.

"We are growing our Aboriginal nursing and midwifery workforce with the launch of the Aboriginal Enrolled Nurse Training program," Mr Edgington said.

"Growing our Aboriginal nursing and midwifery workforce is essential to delivering high quality care in every region of the Territory.

"The Aboriginal Enrolled Nurse Training Program is a significant investment in developing local talent and supporting the next generation of Aboriginal health professionals.

"This program is designed so participants can succeed as future enrolled nurses working in their own communities."

Coming from areas across the Territory, including Alice Springs and the Tiwi Islands, seven participants are taking part in the program in its first year.

After completion, participants are eligible to

TRAINING: Participants in the new Aboriginal Enrolled Nurse Training program taking part in a training activity. (NT Government/Minister for Health) register as an enrolled nurse with the Nursing & Midwifery Board of Australia, and to undertake a graduate program at an NT Health hospital.

During their training, the students are guided and supervised by a registered nurse as they learn a range of skills including maintaining a safe environment, assisting patients with personal care, and undertaking specific client observations.

NT Health also works with Indigenous Allied Health Australia (IAHA) to deliver culturally secure mentoring and wraparound support for students to improve course completion and retention.

The students have begun their work placement at Royal Darwin Hospital and work closely together using a buddy system to check in on each other and share their learning experiences.

Devina Parry, from the Tiwi Islands, who is part of the new program said: "I hope to get more experience and knowledge to become a Registered Nurse and give back to the community."

Probe into Ellery Creek drowning

NORTHERN Territory Police are investigating the drowning death of a 25-year-old woman at Ellery Creek Big Hole, west of Alice Springs, on Sunday 12 April.

About 12:50pm, the Joint Emergency Services Communications Centre received reports that CPR was being performed on a woman at the popular tourist site.

St John Ambulance attended and took over life-saving efforts; however, she was unable to be revived.

Ntaria Police have established a crime scene at the site, and Northern Territory Parks and Wildlife rangers are also in attendance. The area has been closed to the public while detectives from Alice Springs conduct investigations.

Northern Territory Police are urging all visitors to take care around waterways and follow all safety advice when visiting remote locations.

Jam packed Youth Week

By Gladys Barreta

NT Youth Week, running until 15 April, offers a range of free activities for young people around Alice Springs, helping them stay engaged, connected, and having fun during the school holidays.

Events include cooking-style activities, skate and bike sessions, and organised outings to Parrtjima.

At the Alice Springs Aquatic and Leisure Centre, young people can enjoy free mini-golf, waterslide sessions, swimming, and a special AFLW player signing event.

Evening pool sessions will also run throughout the week.

The Alice Springs Public Library will host interactive virtual reality sessions, while Newland Park will feature “Wheely Good Fun” afternoons and a BMX workshop with music.

Sport and recreation activities are a major focus, including 10-pin bowling at the Dust Bowl, youth climbing sessions at the YMCA, street soccer, basketball, and an extreme bike obstacle course at Albrecht Oval.

The Gap Youth Centre will run extended after-hours programs for 10 to 18-year-olds on several days, offering games, arts and crafts, internet access, sports, outings, meals, and transport.

Most events are free and do not require registration, making them accessible for all ages and interests.

YOUTH: Arjumand Khan, Abhineet Nirmal, Minister for Youth, Seniors and Equality Jinson Charls, Eva Susanto and Harry Munkara.

New Araluen exhibition explores cultural identity

ALICE Springs artist Sally Mumford will present a new exhibition, Thirty-six Views of Mparntwe, offering a reflection on the town’s unique landscape and cultural identity.

The exhibition follows Ms Mumford’s long-standing connection to Arrernte Country, which began around the time of her 1998 solo exhibition at the Araluen Arts Centre.

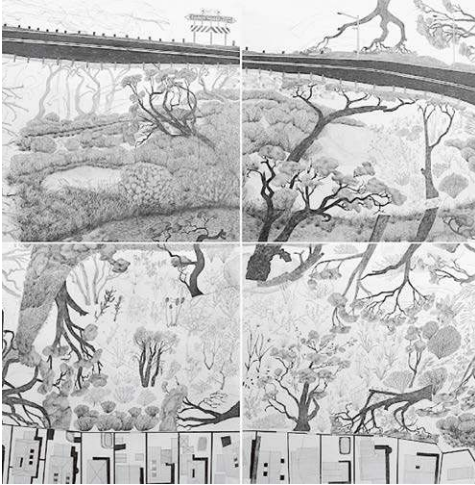

Since then, her art practice and teaching have deepened her engagement with place, community and storytelling.

“From just about any position in the township of Mparntwe, you only have to look out to see ranges and hills,” Ms Mumford said.

“They are significant to the town’s cultural identity. They hold and connect us deeply to place.”

Through drawing and printmaking, the exhibition explores the relationship between the town’s built environment and its surrounding natural landscape, examining the intersection of history, identity and living topography.

Ms Mumford is a lecturer in the arts faculty at Charles Darwin University’s Alice Springs campus.

Featured Artwork: Sally Mumford, Ankerre Ankerre (graphite on paper 112 x 152cm)

The exhibition will be open from 25 April to 14 June, with an official opening on Saturday, 28 March at 10.30am.

An artist floor talk will be announced at a later date.

Uplifting story of courage

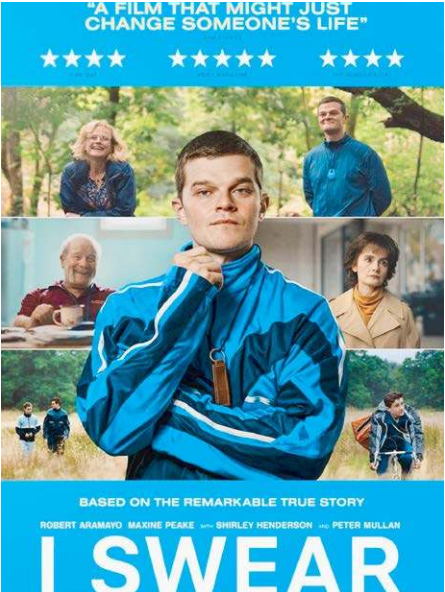

I Swear follows the true story of Tourette Syndrome campaigner John Davidson’s journey with Tourette’s through his troubled teens and early adulthood, having been diagnosed at 15 years old in 1980s Britain - a time when the condition was little known and entirely misunderstood.

Initially alienated from his peers and his family, Davidson perseveres in his attempt to live a “normal” life against the odds, finding some unlikely champions along the way.

“A masterclass of inspirational storytelling that sheds light on Tourette’s syndrome. Robert Aramayo embodies John Davidson with deep vulnerability, grit, and a quiet grace, one of the best of the year so far.” - Ruth Maramis, FlixChatter Film Blog

“An amazing, brave, incredibly funny, somewhat sad yet ultimately uplifting tale about personal courage and the importance community support plays in embracing those dealing with challenges.” - Jim Schembri, jimschembri.com

Gooney Bird's historic path

By Phil Williams

ALICE Springs was treated with a visit of a fully restored 1942 Douglas DC-3 last month.

The unmistakable rumble of a pair of Pratt and Whitney radial engines were a giveaway as it flew in above the suburbs of Northside on its approach to the Alice Springs Airport from Darwin.

The Spirit of Douglas is a lovingly preserved DC-3, brought back to honour Donald Douglas and the aircraft that transformed aviation.

She carries the spirit of exploration and with the iconic note of twin radial engines and the clean lines of her pioneering design and is crossing the globe in a daring bid to retrace history's great air journeys.

The aircraft is visiting countries and regions where the DC-3, affectionately known as the 'Gooney Bird', had a major impact on aviation.

In Australia, Alice Springs is no exception.

The former Connellan Airways had several DC-3s in its fleet along with other Douglas manufactured aircraft,

Some of those aircraft form a key part of the Alice Springs Aviation Museum in the old Connellan hangar at Araluen.

The DC-3 is one of the most important aircraft ever built, and touched down in Alice Springs not as a museum piece, but as a living, flying reminder of the moment air travel changed forever.

The world-wide tour honours the first circumnavigation of the globe by an aircraft, a feat that was completed by three Douglas World Cruisers in 1924.

The DC-3 transformed passenger flying from an unreliable, uncomfortable novelty into a safe, accessible and commercially viable way to travel.

For the first time, airlines could turn a profit carrying passengers alone.

With the introduction of the DC-3, journeys that once took days were reduced to just hours.

As a result, flying became something people could trust and even enjoy.

The Spirit of Douglas was purchased by its current owner, New Zealand businessman and pilot, Mark Stewart, in 2023.

Mr Stewart said the project started from a whim of having an old aircraft as a man cave on his property.

"I always wanted to put a man room there (on the property) and I always thought an old fuselage would be the way to go," he said.

"I've got a big airstrip there, I've always loved aviation and thought that's a good place to assemble and have a drink.

"It had been a dream of mine for about 30 years to go down that track.

Mr Stewart said initially, he was thinking of something big "like a 747".

After discussions with his brother about different types of aircraft and the practicalities of what to get, he decided on the DC-3.

"I always loved the DC-3s as a little kid, watching them at the airport in Christchurch in my early years, and loved the shape so thought, 'Why don't we think about a DC-3? There's plenty of them around and lots of stationary ones that don't fly, let's start with that.'"

After making an enquiry to an aircraft broker, the plans changed when the Spirit of Douglas became available a few months later in Oregon in the US.

Mr Stewart said he contracted to buy the plane, sight unseen from photographs, on condition that it was professionally inspected and he was able to view it in person.

The inspection was completed almost immediately by the company that was maintaining it.

"As soon as I saw the plane it was mine. Done!" Mr Stewart said.

The next hurdle for Mr Stewart was getting the airframe from the US back to New Zealand.

"We decided if we're going to take it home, then we might as well film the journey and we might as well write a book and tell our adventure," Mr Stewart said.

As the first step of the journey in 2024 it was one of four DC-3s that made the crossing of the Atlantic as part of the 80th anniversary D-Day invasion celebrations.

Since then the plane has been flying across the globe to mark the 100th anniversary of the Douglas Aircraft Company taking the first plane around the world in 1924, while 2025 marked the 90th year of the DC-3 type.

"We're nearly halfway through," Mr Stewart said.

"We started in Portland, Oregon and we've taken it across the US, Greenland, Iceland, the UK, France and all the way down through Europe, the Middle East and now Australia."

After leaving Australia, the Spirit of Douglas flew to Norfolk Island before touching down in Auckland then its hometown of Christchurch.

It will stay in New Zealand for several months before continuing to complete the world trip.

"We're three years in and only halfway round the world.

"We'll leave it in NZ for three or four months and then keep on going on the route back and get it and get all the way back up to the States."

"That will be another year or so down the track and then we'll figure out what we're going to do next."

Mr Stewart said the plane was a magnet, attracting loads of interest from people as it travelled.

"I thought we'd be under the radar, an old plane flying around who cares? But actually, I found the opposite. It's everybody's aircraft."

"Everybody owns this aircraft. We're just the current custodians. There's been so many owners before us and somebody might be the future custodian."

"It's just a passing moment in time, but you've got to share these things," he said.

"It's been an amazing human endeavour story more than anything."

The Garden Guru

Geoff Miers

Asian greens for a stir-fry

INCREASINGLY more Australians are diversifying their eating habits, with many people turning to Asian food styles and central to these styles is the art of stir-frying and winter offers the ideal opportunity to grow vegetables ideal for the stir-fry.

Stir-fry vegetables taste best when fresh produce is used and the way to ensure your vegies are fresh is to grow your own.

The cooler days of autumn are ideal for introducing a variety of Asian greens into your garden and they grow so quickly when planted now and they are so easy to grow.

Each week plant a few seeds or a punnet or two of several Asian greens and you can be guaranteed a steady supply of greens right through the cooler months.

Planting seeds is the most economical way, although many varieties are increasingly now available in seedling form.

I still like to plant seeds - it's cheaper, the seeds do not suffer any transplanting setbacks and I like the suspense in going out into my garden daily to see what next has popped up.

Alternatively, with purchasing several punnets you can have an instant garden within an hour or two.

Pak Choy, Wong Bok, Tat Soi, Chinese Broccoli, Kai-lan and Chinese snow peas are only some of the many varieties available today.

All grow well in Alice if planted at this time of the year.

Many will bolt or go to seed if planted in the warmer months. They are essentially cool season vegetables.

There are basically two varieties of Chinese Cabbage that thrive at this time of the year. They are Pak Choy and Wong Bok.

Pak Choy, also known as Bok Choy, has white stems and dark green leaves, while Wong Bok has a cylindrical compact head that is similar to, but much sweeter than, the round European cabbage.

Both are great stir fry ingredients when very lightly cooked, while Wong Bok can also be used in salads.

Both Pak Choy and Wong Bok are extremely rapid growers and are hungry for nitrogen.

They respond well to being regularly feed with a liquid fertiliser that is high in nitrogen.

Chinese Broccoli Kai-lan, also known as Gai Lan, can be direct seeded into the garden or grown in seedling trays or punnets and transplanted out.

Seedlings grown in the ground will need to be thinned out as they develop however the few week old seedlings are great when chopped up in a salad.

Chinese broccoli is unlike traditional broccoli in that it doesn't have a tight head.

The buds come in loose clusters that are usually harvested when the first white flowers appear.

After the main stem has been cut side shoots will develop and these can be harvested regularly, provided their high nitrogen dietary needs are met.

Tat Soi is a versatile vegetable served cooked or in salads. It has excellent flavour.

It has deep green spoon-shaped leaves that are produced in abundance.

Pick leaves while young, they are much sweeter.

As with most Asian greens they are similar to growing lettuce.

They love heaps of water and being feed with regular applications of a nitrogenous soluble fertiliser such as Aquasol or Thrive.

Lastly consider planting Chinese snow peas.

They need to grow along a fence, up a trellis or construct a series of tepees and grown them up these frames that can be made from bamboo or wooden stakes.

Snow peas are rapid growers, you will be harvesting in 8-10 weeks and they will produce for literally months.

Snow peas, like most Asian greens make for great stir fry ingredients or are equally suited for salads.

Along with Asian greens, most leafy greens absolutely thrive planted at this time of the year.

These include Rainbow Chard and Fordhook Giant Silverbeet, Baby-leaf and Ironman spinach, endive, Kale and many lettuce varieties.

Battle ready

From acting to hosting game shows, Rodger Corser has more than a few tricks up his sleeve. Ahead of The Floor's second season, he tells Siobhan Duck where he finds inspiration and what roles he'd like to take on next RODGER Corser hopes to soon make all his fans' Christmases come at once.

Five years after saying goodbye to the beloved folk of Whyhope, the Gold Logie nominee is lobbying for the cast of Doctor Doctor to reunite for a special festive film.

"Some of us caught up recently at an awards show – and the producers were there too [and we talked about a reboot]," he teases, adding that the conversation has been followed up in the cast WhatsApp group chat.

"Look, it's hard to get everyone back together when everyone moves on and does different things, but we could throw them together for a Stan Christmas movie.

"It's perfect for a Christmas movie. The family are all together and there's a crisis that threatens Christmas. The Grinch visits Whyhope, perhaps?"

Corser is right. Getting the band back together will be no mean feat.

Doctor Doctor creator Tony McNamara and wife Belinda Bromilow (who played eccentric hospital receptionist Betty Bell) have since relocated to Hollywood, where McNamara has written Oscar-nominated scripts for The Favourite and Poor Things. Bromilow, meanwhile, starred alongside Elle Fanning in the McNamara-penned comedy The Great.

Uli Latukefu has also been riding high since the drama ended in 2021, playing the younger version of Dwayne Johnson in the US comedy Young Rock and starring in blockbusters such as Alien: Covenant and Black Adam.

Corser has been delighted to see his mates doing so well overseas, but that doesn't mean he has hit McNamara up for a role in his next big project.

"But I am sure Tony gets that [request] from a lot of people," he jokes.

Rather, Corser is looking to make his own opportunities (on and off camera), teasing that he's about to pitch a new drama to TV executives.

"I studied film and TV as opposed to acting, so I don't mind having an idea where you're not even the main person," he explains of pivoting to production.

"A lot of actors would probably just go, 'Well, my number-one objective is to make a show all about me playing the lead character', whereas I've got to be realistic.

"I'm 53, I'm not 37. I hit that sweet spot probably in my 40s. And that's when we started, Doctor Doctor. Hugh Knight wasn't a 53-year-old surgeon, he was 39 – which is a great age for a protagonist because you've got superiors and subordinates. And there might even be kids involved. It [the dynamics] changes as you get older."

The dawn of the streaming age may mean viewers are now spoiled for choice and that Australian-made content – such as Apple Cider Vinegar, The Artful Dodger and The Lost Flowers of Alice Hart – draws overseas audiences, but Corser says that doesn't always translate into more work or more local stories being told.

"I'm not going to lie, there's less stuff around that's like Doctor Doctor, because everything's going to be a 'co-pro' [that's industry speak for a partnership between two production companies, usually based in different countries].

"So, now you've got to have a show that's accessible for a BBC audience or FX audience in the States, they're all co-pros.

"I sort of fall back on some conventions, because they work for a reason," he shrugs.

"And so, you watch other people who are very good at that stuff and you say, 'Why does that work?' And pull it apart.

"I don't mind borrowing and putting on that game show mask a little bit."

He's stopped short of growing a moustache like Burgess or entering the impressive stage with a jaunty

“IT'S EASY TO LOOK AT SOMEONE AND GO: 'WELL, YOU'RE ONLY 20-ODD, SO YOU WON'T KNOW A LOT ABOUT THIS SUBJECT'. HOW WRONG YOU CAN BE.

"Getting uniquely Australian stories is becoming harder because you have to cover a lot of bases, and please a lot of executives across LA and London."

Always keen to diversify, Corser has now happily entered his game show era as the host of hugely successful Nine series The Floor.

Even though he's just being himself, Corser says hosting a juggernaut like The Floor still requires him to put on a good act.

To do that, Corser has drawn inspiration from game show legends like Sale of the Century's Tony Barber and Wheel of Fortune host John Burgess.

run à la Barber, and has found his own groove in the genre.

"But what I learned about my show is that – because I don't read questions – my job is a bit different," he explains.

"My job is to draw out the best in our contestants, to chat with them and to let them tell their stories.

"I give them a chance to make that funny joke and feel comfortable enough to do that."

An international format, The Floor is filmed in a purpose-built studio in Amsterdam, where participants try to claim territory on a giant illuminated floor through a series of head-to-head duels on specific subjects.

So, has Corser's general knowledge improved by osmosis while hosting The Floor?

"You'd think so, wouldn't you?" he says, drolly.

"I also played a doctor for five seasons [on Doctor Doctor]. Everyone thought I could suddenly do open-heart surgery. But I had very good writers and medical advisors that gave me small little portions of knowledge and actions to complete that I got five takes to get right, and they stitched it all together.

"It's much the same here. I'm very lucky people are giving me all the correct things to say in my ear [through an earpiece]."

If the show has taught Corser anything it's to not judge a book by its cover. On The Floor, people from all walks of life and all ages – from reality TV stars to retirees – step up to compete.

"Age is a big thing," Corser explains.

"It's easy to look at someone and go: 'Well, you're only 20-odd, so you won't know a lot about this subject'.

"How wrong you can be. The younger contestants get a bit of a bad rap. People think those generations are not as attentive as previous generations or that they're stuck in technology and so forth... I think they shine on our show. They have their breadth of knowledge across multiple subjects."

9Gem, Friday, 8pm, M (2015)

Robert DeNiro and Anne Hathaway (both pictured) star in this fish-out-of-water comedy from writer-director Nancy Meyers (Something's Gotta Give, It's Complicated), who has a knack for perfectly mixing sweetness with unexpected silliness. DeNiro plays smartly dressed widower Ben who, at 70, turns his back on retirement and lands a job as a senior intern at an online fashion site, run by high flyer Jules (Hathaway). The two stars create great chemistry in this adorably observant tale. ★★★★★

GHOST
ABC Entertains, Friday, 8.30pm, M (1990)

Whether you like it or not, the one major thing anyone who sees Ghost walks away with is the indelible impression of Demi Moore and Patrick Swayze (both pictured) writhing their hands around a potter's wheel. The ceramics moments come to an untimely end, though, as Swayze is murdered in a botched mugging. However, he is able to communicate with Moore through a psychic (Whoopi Goldberg). There's a sizeable element of humour to this enduring romantic thriller. ★★★★★

BIRDS OF PREY
9Go!, Saturday, 9.30pm, MA15+ (2020)

After breaking up with the Joker, chaotic DC Comics antiheroine Harley Quinn (Margot Robbie, pictured) learns she is in grave danger without her ex's protection. With a ruthless crime lord (Ewan McGregor) and his hitman (Chris Messina) on her tail, Quinn teams up with detective Renee Montoya (Rosie Perez) and two unlikely allies – the Huntress (Mary Elizabeth Winstead) and Black Canary (Jurnee Smollett-Bell) – to save pickpocket Cassandra Cain (Ella Jay Basco) and Gotham City itself. ★★★★★

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE - DEAD RECKONING
10 Drama, Sunday, 7pm, PG (2023)

You'd think Tom Cruise's super-spy Ethan Hunt would have run out of puff by now, but the seventh instalment of the long-running action franchise is just as exhilarating as ever. The scarily plausible threat this time around is a rogue AI known as the Entity, which is being wielded by a mysterious human baddie (Esai Morales), forcing Ethan and the IMF team to recruit the services of alluring thief Grace (Hayley Atwell, pictured with Cruise) to stop the Entity from unleashing chaos. ★★★★★

SHERLOCK HOLMES
9Go!, Monday, 8pm, M (2009)

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle would be proud of this version of his famous super-sleuth, brilliantly brought to life by director Guy Ritchie. The story pales in comparison to the chemistry between Robert Downey Jr as Holmes and Jude Law (both pictured), who hams it up as trusty sidekick Dr Watson. On the hunt for a serial killer, they meet all manner of London baddies, including the dubious Irene Adler (Rachel McAdams) and as the bodies start piling up, their list of suspects grows by the day. ★★★★★

ARRIVAL
9Go!, Tuesday, 8pm, M (2016)

This thoughtful sci-fi film casts Amy Adams (pictured) as linguist Louise Banks, who is tasked with figuring out how to communicate with the aliens who have just landed on Earth in giant egg-shaped pods. As the human race holds its breath, she works with scientist Ian (Jeremy Renner) to uncover the visitors' purpose on our planet. Adams' understated performance holds the whole thing together, and it's refreshing to see a first-contact film where violence isn't the answer. ★★★★★

The Guide

BLUE MURDER MOTEL ABC TV, Saturday, 7.30pm

When a summer storm slams into Mowai Bay in this charming murder mystery's penultimate chapter, the Blue Motel finds itself at capacity with stranded tourists and out-of-towners. The roads are closed, the power is out and Vinny (Michala Banas) and Cole's (Brett Tucker, pictured) conference room has become a makeshift community shelter. So, when the local radio DJ starts broadcasting "dead air", it's almost certain the killer is right under their noses. However, Jamie (Jayden Daniels) is beginning to doubt the retired cop couple's credentials and a surprise visitor from their past (The Flying Doctors' Christopher Stollery) puts Vinny on edge. It sets the scene for a thrilling conclusion next week.

PICK OF THE WEEK

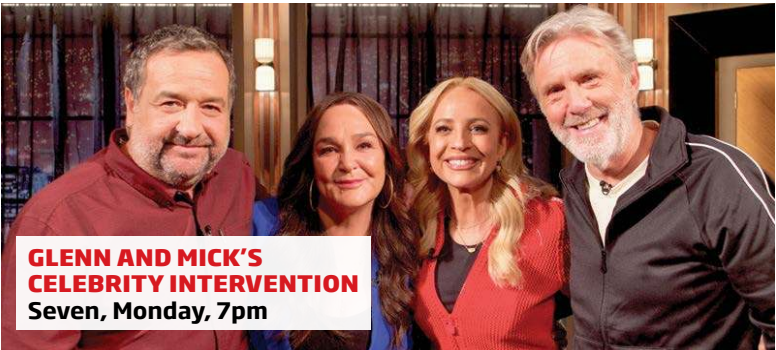

Recipe for success:
MasterChef judges
Andy Allen, Sofia
Levin, Poh Ling Yeow
and Jean-Christophe Novelli.

MASTERCHEF AUSTRALIA 10, Sunday, 6.30pm

As this culinary sensation comes of age with its 18th season, its success has become something of a self-fulfilling prophecy. No longer reliant on world-famous chefs to appear as guest judges, the hottest kitchen on TV could now fuel an entire season using only its superstar graduates. A new generation steps into the kitchen chasing gastronomic glory in Sunday's premiere – including 19-year-old student Luke, who can't remember a time before MasterChef. Judges Andy Allen, Jean-Christophe Novelli, Poh Ling Yeow and Sofia Levin put the top 40 contenders through their paces, with just 10 coveted white aprons on offer for the best dishes of the day.

GLENN AND MICK'S CELEBRITY INTERVENTION Seven, Monday, 7pm

Lured to a TV studio by comedian Glenn Robbins and shepherded through a doorway reminiscent of This is Your Life's gilded entry, the stars featured in this riotous new format won't know what hit them. An archive of video clips, photos and stories awaits, along with some old friends, but Robbins and his co-conspirator Mick Molloy won't be heaping praise upon their guests – rather, they confront them with brutal home truths in a lightly mocking fashion. Carrie Bickmore is the first celebrity in the hot seat, with input from Kate Langbroek (pictured second from left with Molloy, Bickmore and Robbins), Pete Heliar and Tommy Little, as well as her mum Jennie and son Ollie.

MY RENO RULES Seven, Tuesday, 7pm

From a fresh coat of paint to modernising fixtures, you don't need to tweak much to achieve an eye-catching home renovation. The producers of this property makeover series opt for a similar high-impact, low-effort approach, putting an updated spin on The Block's enduring reality renovation format while incorporating unique elements to hopefully improve the overall result. Hosted by Dr Chris Brown (pictured), it follows four teams as they compete to renovate, furnish and landscape two 1960s-era suburban houses. In a twist, billionaire sponsor Adrian Portelli sets rules and challenges that can change at any moment, with the finished products given away to two lucky families in the season finale rather than going under the hammer.

SPARRING PARTNERS

BEEF Streaming, Netflix NETFLIX

A fresh feud hits boiling point as this deliciously dark dramedy returns for a second standalone season packed with tantalising tension and sizzling star power.

Arriving three years after the award-winning debut instalment that follows Ali Wong and Steven Yeun as strangers navigating the irrational fallout of a nasty road rage incident, the follow-up chapter ups the ante even further with another highly relatable premise.

Engaged couple Austin (Charles Melton) and Ashley (Cailee Spaeny) are working in entry-level jobs at an upscale country club when they inadvertently witness a fiery clash between their boss Josh (Oscar Isaac), the general manager, and his wife Lindsay (Carey Mulligan), an interior designer.

The alarming altercation soon spirals into a tangled web of coercion and manipulation as the warring couples vie for the approval of the elitist club's billionaire owner Chairwoman Park (Youn Yuh-jung, Minari), who is struggling to manage her own crisis with her second husband, Doctor Kim (Song Kang-ho, Parasite).

Showrunner Lee Sung Jin should be considered in the same class as Mike White (The White Lotus) for the masterful way he crafts an intriguing narrative to explore power, privilege and class-based conflict.

Under the tagline "Every couple meets their match", the absorbing series also explores the idea that being "happily" married is often relative and can come with its own soul-crushing societal pressures.

With its compelling storyline spread over eight half-hour episodes, this second helping of Beef is a chaotic but ultimately satisfying treat worth savouring.

- Travis Lewis

Second serve: Lindsay (Carey Mulligan) is locked in a fiery feud in Beef's sophomore season.

EUPHORIA Streaming, HBO Max HBO max

Given how the careers of Zendaya (pictured), Jacob Elordi and Sydney Sweeney have exploded since season two of this edgy drama in 2022, it's no surprise that it's taken this long for the third instalment. Jumping forward five years, it finds Rue in Mexico in debt to some nasty drug dealers, while Nate and Cassie are stuck in a dysfunctional marriage.

TASKMASTER Streaming, Binge BINGE

Greg Davies and Alex Horne return to stoke the mayhem as this wacky British comedy panel game show returns for season 21. This time, Hollywood star Kumail Nanjiani, Gavin & Stacey favourite Joanna Page and satirist Armando Iannucci (Veep) are among the familiar faces taking part in a series of bizarre challenges designed to test their ingenuity.

THE MINIATURE WIFE Streaming, Stan Stan.

Succession's Matthew Macfadyen stars as a scientist who accidentally shrinks his wife (Elizabeth Banks, pictured) down to just six inches tall in this sci-fi dramedy. The unusual circumstances force the pair to confront their marital issues while they figure out a solution. Keep an eye out for Aussie comic Ronny Chieng in the impressive supporting cast that also includes Fleabag's Sian Clifford and O-T Fagbenle (The Handmaid's Tale).

MARGO'S GOT MONEY TROUBLES Streaming, Apple TV Apple tv

Elle Fanning plays the titular Margo, a university dropout and aspiring writer who gets pregnant after an affair with her professor and turns to paid subscription platform OnlyFans to support herself. Based on Ruffi Thorpe's best-selling novel of the same name, this eight-part dramedy co-stars Michelle Pfeiffer (pictured, left, with Fanning) and Nick Offerman as Margo's flaky parents, with Nicole Kidman in a memorable minor role.

AMERICAN GLADIATORS Streaming from Friday, Prime Video prime

If you're missing the acrobatic antics and jaw-dropping athleticism of Australian Ninja Warrior, you'll be rapt with this revival of the classic physical competition series. Each intense episode follows a group of amateur contenders as they face off against 16 seasoned professionals in various physical tests of strength, speed and agility.

Kicking back at Aileron

By Phil Williams

THE old bush racing track at Aileron, about 130km north of Alice Springs, came alive over the Easter weekend.

Akubras, RMs, moleskins, and western shirts were on show as bushies from far and wide turned out to have a good time at the annual Aileron Bush Weekend with only one rule to be heeded...

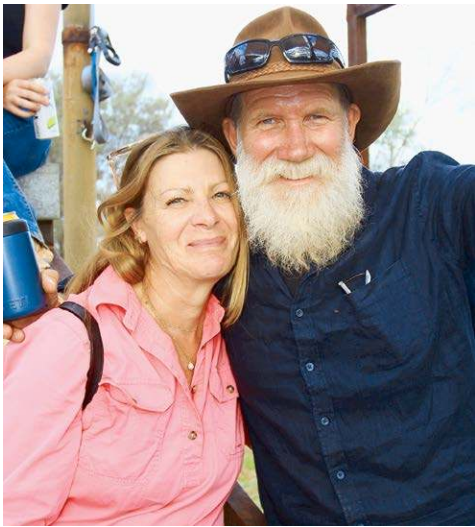

Kick back and have a good time.

GOOD TIMES: Charlie Williams and Taj Lyons enjoying themselves at Aileron.

HANG ON: A rider tries to hang on to his mount during the chaotic Mexican donkey ride. (Phil Williams)

COUPLE: Jen and Bruce Schubert enjoying the Aileron Easter Weekend.

IRISH: Vanessa McAuley and Alice Leonard, proud of their Irish roots at Aileron.

GO GIRL: Friends cheer as their mate shows off her skills at sinking a 'shoe'.

SCRAMBLE: Girls go wild as they try to win the $50 taped to a soccer ball.

FANS: Novice bull rider Sam Brown's fans give him some encouragement after he lost the battle against his ride.

NOT ME: Chris Ship and James Christian ham it up at Aileron.

BARREL GIRLS: Helpers roll barrels into place for the motorkhana barrel race on Sunday morning.

WATER COOLER: Riders gather in conversation around the bush equivalent of the office water cooler during the Aileron Gymkhana.

SPRING: Grace Ryan gets some height in the bouncy rodeo.

ORGANISERS: The Aileron committee was all smiles after the rodeo.

WINNER: A crisp $100 note was the prize for downing a shoe.

CHEERS: Josh Faulkner, Stefan Brits and Seth Jones taking in the Aileron cheer.

ONLY $14 a month!

Honouring last of scoopers

By Phil Williams

KUHN Court in Sadadeen is named after Christoff (Chris) Wilhelm Kuhn and his wife Mary Jane (nee Ross).

The Commonwealth Railways employed Chris Kuhn to use a horse and scoop to clear sand drifts and debris from the railway line between Marree and Alice Springs between 1928-53.

For his work, he became known as the last of the ‘scoopers.’

Often working in intense heat, Kuhn cleared the hot sand right back from the rails.

As the rail line went through gaps in the sand hills, the train was often forced to stop due to sand drifts up to one metre deep covering the line.

Male passengers were often required to assist in clearing the drifts to allow the train to continue its journey.

Kuhn and his wife Mary, known affectionately as Ma, married in Tarcoola on 11 December 1916.

They lived for some time at Irripitana siding, about 24km south of William Creek in South Australia, and followed the rail line as it progressed north.

They brought up 12 children through the 20s and 30s during their isolated and harsh nomadic life on the railway outposts.

The Kuhns’ hospitality was well known and they befriended many travellers.

Under the pen name Sandhill Gertie, Mary wrote letters to Adelaide Chronicle columnists Madame Wu and Elizabeth George.

After the tragic death of one of their daughters due to the harsh conditions, the family moved to Alice Springs.

Mary later became Head Cook at the old Alice Springs Hospital, where she worked for many years and helped care for sick Aboriginal children.

On 4 March, 1955, just two years after retiring, at the age of 67, Kuhn and a friend drowned in the Todd River when their vehicle was washed downstream during a flash flood.

A report in the Canberra Times of 7 March 1955 reads “The Jeep in which they were travelling was swept away in the flooded Tod River, at Alice Springs.

“The residents of Alice Springs turned out, almost to a man, to search for the bodies but although the river was patrolled for 15 miles downstream, only clothing was found.

The wrecked jeep was found a quarter of a mile (400 metres) away.

Mary died in 1966 at the age of 70.

He's my brother

By Phil Williams

FOR some, working with a sibling might sound like a challenge.

For Oliver and Jasper King, working at Power and Water Corporation, it's been an opportunity.

From playing on footy fields while growing up in Tasmania, to the red dirt of Alice Springs, the brothers are building their careers with the utility company.

Oliver recently passed his final exam to become an electrician, while his younger brother is at the start of his career.

Hot on the heels of his older brother, 25-year-old Jasper, is part of the 2026 apprentice intake and training to be a linesman.

His path to beginning a trade was heavily influenced by 27-year-old Oliver.

"Through my experience with GTNT and Power and Water, I knew he'd be supported," Oliver said.

"He's been hearing from me for years about how great it is at Power and Water, the work-life balance and support."

Oliver said the biggest leap wasn't the job, though, it was getting his brother to make the move.

"Convincing him to move to Alice Springs was probably the harder part," he said.

"I told him becoming an apprentice was a great opportunity and sometimes you've just got to take a chance."

Taking his brother's advice, Jasper relocated from Melbourne to Alice Springs last year before applying to be an apprentice.

For Oliver, who has now returned to work as a qualified electrician, it's the people at work that make the difference.

"If you don't work with a good crew, any job can be hard," he said.

CAREERS: Oliver and Jasper King have both taken career options with Power and Water in Alice Springs. (Power And Water)

CHEEKY: Oliver and Jasper King in a cheeky moment growing up in Tasmania. (King Family: Power And Water)

"But the team here are great. It doesn't always feel like work, it feels like being around a good group of people."

That culture is something he wanted his younger brother to experience and it's already paying off.

"We're technically in different areas, but in Alice Springs everyone works closely together," Oliver said.

"There's already been a couple of times where I've been able to work with him."

Outside of work, the brothers are close too, living together as housemates after eight years apart.

"We play golf, watch sport, that sort of thing," Oliver said.

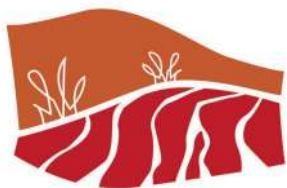

"It's like having a good mate around all the time."

As he steps into his new role as a fully qualified electrician, Oliver is looking forward to mentoring the next generation.

"I enjoy sharing what I've learned and helping others find their way," he says.

Speaking about working with his younger brother, he said "He's easy-going and eager to learn. He listens and that's what matters."

A celebration of inclusion

By Phil Williams

FOLLOWING the success of the first Mini Paralympics in Alice Springs last year, where more than 50 people took part, this year that number exploded to more than 100.

Para Pathways Manager for the NT Jodie Zanini said the day was an opportunity for everyone with any impairment or disability to have a go at sport.

“What we’re trying to build is some form of a foundation for a pathway in Alice Springs so that anyone can come and try sport.

“Today is not just one day. We also have our all abilities programs and swimabilities program, which run throughout the year.

“Those are the entry points, and from there we identify how we can help participants.

There were six different sports including tennis, wheelchair basketball and wheelchair rugby, with representatives of some of the sporting bodies on hand to answer questions and provide advice for those wanting to take up paralympic sports.

With 102 registered participants, it was almost double the number from 2025 when 56 were involved in the activities.

One of those taking part in the sports was teenager Quade Stone, playing wheelchair basketball.

“He was at our Mini-Paralympics last year,” Ms Zanini said.

“We identified him (as having excellent potential), and we’ve already sent him to a national competition, where he was awarded most improved player.

“We will fly him a round to have a go at other wheelchair basketball tournaments.

“We’re looking at him for the 2032 Paralympic Games in Brisbane.

Mr Stone’s father, Daniel, said his son was an all-round sports person, playing basketball, rugby league and boxing, and they accidentally stumbled across the program last year.

“He’s always been interested in sport and we’ve been trying to find a pathway for Paralympics.

“Last year, when the Mini Paralympics was on, we didn’t even know about it.

“I’d dropped him off at school, and on my way to work, and I heard about it on the radio,” he said.

“I ended up turning around and picked him up and took him to Traeger Park (last year’s venue) and everything has just progressed from there.”

Member for Braitling Joshua Burgoyne, who officially opened the event, said the Alice Springs Mini Paralympics was a fantastic celebration of inclusion, participation, and opportunity, with registrations this year almost triple last year’s numbers.

“The Mini Paralympics ensures every young person feels like they belong and can give sport a go, helping to break down barriers and show that sport is for everyone, no matter their ability,” he said.

“It was wonderful to see so much positive energy at the event, with great participation numbers and young people supporting each other and getting involved with such enthusiasm.”

Your week ahead

This week's triplicity of planets in Taurus, which is all about stability, security and sensuality, introduces the annual season of autumnal feasting...

ARIES

(Mar 21 - Apr 19)

With five planets in Aries and three in the zodiac's most stubborn sign, this week does its own thing and isn't scheduled to be a people pleaser. Best way of keeping the peace if conversations go haywire? Pause, take a breath, think carefully before saying something that can't be unsaid.

Best day:
Saturday 25 April

TAURUS

(Apr 20 - May 20)

Happy birthday, Taurans! As this week's Sun joins Venus and Uranus in your practical sign, celestial machinery rolls into action to ground last month's inspirations into workable game plans. As the builder of the zodiac, this is your time to stabilise and lay down the foundations needed before moving forward.

Best day:
Sunday 19 April

GEMINI

(May 21 - Jun 20)

The current upswing of practical planets is auspicious for mapping out business plans, making a pitch or prepping to go for a promotion. Limit distractions and be specific: this week won't respond well to a dozen different options. Conversational honesty and straight talk are favoured when discussing major decisions.

Best day:
Monday 20 April

CANCER

(Jun 21 - Jul 22)

As this week's Sun moves into its most down-to-earth transit, perhaps your idea of stability isn't what you once thought, or the solid basis you relied on has shifted. Either way, this transit is asking everyone to redefine what true security is in these times of accelerated change.

Best day:
Wednesday 22 April

LEO

(Jul 23 - Aug 22)

This week three planets in Leo's zone of public image and professional reputation are suggesting it's time to move on from the vision boards, wish lists and inspired ideas of Aries season - to buckle up and knuckle down to the business of game plans, spreadsheets and timelines.

Best day:
Friday 24 April

VIRGO

(Aug 23 - Sep 22)

The practical magic of your fellow earth sign's month in the Sun suits you right down to the ground, and while this week is sensible and economical, the goal isn't austerity. It's about guilt-free enjoyment and you minimalists getting comforted up for the cosy season of mellow fruitfulness.

Best day:
Thursday 23 April

LIBRA

(Sep 23 - Oct 22)

This week's balancing act? Practicality and application with beauty and pleasure. As Venus threesomes with the Sun and wildcard Uranus in her other favourite sign, magic could happen in unexpected and refreshingly different ways. Adding a dash of novelty to switch up your routine might be all it takes.

Best day:
Tuesday 21 April

SCORPIO

(Oct 23 - Nov 21)

With the current celestial emphasis in Scorpio's 'astrozone' of service, routine maintenance and wellbeing, this week asks what aspects of these could use some honest recalibration? Don't underestimate the small things, the mundane moments and nourishing rituals that keep your mood even and life running smoothly.

Best day:
Wednesday 22 April

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov 22 - Dec 21)

With Mercury in a fast-talking fellow fire sign and Jupiter, planet ruler of Sagittarius, in a cautious water sign, plans can hit snags, especially if family's involved. So, run your ideas past a trusted sounding board: a grounded perspective rather than heated opinions is what's needed.

Best day:
Saturday 25 April

CAPRICORN

(Dec 22 - Jan 19)

What to expect with three planets in your creative fun zone? A pressure drop and pleasure lift as this week's more measured pace supports enjoying whatever periods of grace offer themselves in these troubled times. Zen Capricorn Alan Watts described religion as being the transformation of anxiety into laughter.

Best day:
Sunday 19 April

AQUARIUS

(Jan 20 - Feb 18)

Five planets in Aquarians' communications sector are offering assistance for making an assessment of your social ecosystem. Are your collaborations reciprocal, is there anyone who's obviously not contributing, anyone else who deserves some overdue acknowledgment? This week is all about joining forces, but with eyes wide open.

Best day:
Tuesday 21 April

PISCES

(Feb 19 - Mar 20)

If the recent Aries season felt like initiation, now Taurus season offers an invitation to tune into your body's organic knowing. This week's energetic wave connects you to your inner compass which contains clues about your next steps, even if they don't make sense yet. Try not to overthink this.

Best day:
Thursday 23 April

CORRECTIONS: Minister for Corrections Gerard Maley with the first cohort of Trainee Correctional Officers (TCOs) for 2026 at Holtze. (Supplied)

Numbers up

A boost in correctional officers for the Northern Territory has seen the largest intake on record, with recruits coming from a diverse range of backgrounds and countries.

Nine new correctional officers in Alice Springs were part of the first cohort of Trainee Correctional Officers (TCOs) for 2026, graduating last week and joining the frontline.

A total of 38 new officers across the Territory have completed their 11-week training program and will now continue working towards a Certificate III in Correctional Practice over the next 12 months.

Nine officers attended their "march out" in Alice Springs on 10 April, alongside 11 experienced officers who had already started duties.

Minister for Corrections Gerard Maley said the strong interest in the program was a sign of growing confidence in corrections as a career and the important role officers play in the justice system, with the current retention rate for uniformed officers at more than 90 per cent.

"This is one of the largest intakes of recruits we've seen, which shows people are stepping up to serve and make a difference in our community," Mr Maley said. "Our uniformed officer headcount has increased from 620 in July 2023 to 841 in March 2026 - a 36 per cent increase. In Alice Springs alone, numbers have grown from 174 to 235 officers, ensuring more support on the ground.

"In 2025, we recruited and trained 128 trainee correctional officers and 68 experienced officers from other jurisdictions, and we're continuing that momentum in 2026."

Selected from more than 500 applicants, the new recruits come from across the Territory, interstate and overseas, including New Zealand, the United Kingdom, Fiji, Uganda and Kenya, bringing a diverse range of skills and life experience to the role.

Among the graduating cohort is Alice Springs-based TCO Ashley White, who will join her father and two brothers on the frontline at Alice Springs Correctional Centre.

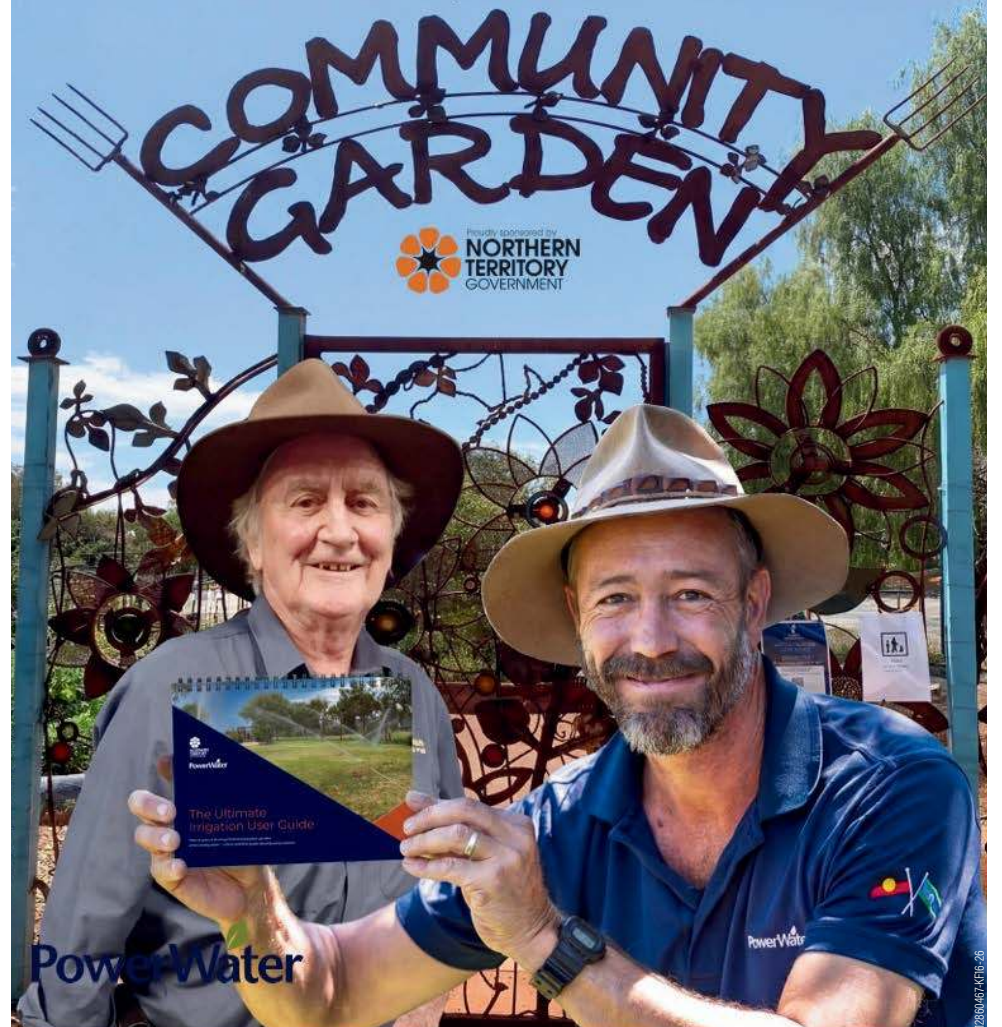

"What inspired me to join Corrections was a career where I can help keep people safe. Having the important role of encouraging prisoners to do better in their lives, while also keeping them safe and secure, is very rewarding," Ms White said. "Another thing that inspired me was my family."

"Both my older brothers and my father work in Corrections, and seeing how much they enjoy their jobs at Alice Springs Correctional Centre was a big factor in me joining. I'm grateful for the opportunity to make this my career."

Motorkhana thrills, spills

By Phil Williams

THE Aileron Bush Weekend wrapped up with some motorkhana action early on Sunday morning.

For some, partying long into the night, meant for some dusty heads as they vied for station bragging rights on two wheels.

There was plenty of action as the dust flew in the quest to find out who had the best motorbike handling skills

Confusion between ambition and ability led to plenty of thrills and spills and some good natured barbs from those on the sidelines as riders of all ages showed off their skill.

(Phil Williams: 546566)

No horsing around!

By Phil Williams

RIDERS were in fine form as the Aileron gymkhana kicked off a weekend of fun and action at the Aileron Bush Weekend across the Easter break.

Gymkhana is serious business and was one of many highlights showcasing the horse handling skills essential to station life

Riders of all ages competed in various events, with the younger ones receiving assistance to navigate challenges such as bending and flag racing while battling for the chance to take home some prize money.

(Phil Williams)

NO MONEY: Another rider misses out on the cash and is headed for a heavy landing after failing to make time.

HAND STAND: Cooper Keeler does some unintended acrobatics on the way to losing his battle with a bull in the Open Bullride.

ASSIST: A rodeo safety clown moves in to assist a fallen cowboy

NO LOVE: A cowboy receives a love tap after coming off second best.

Roughstock win the day

By Phil Williams

THERE were some bruising encounters as man took on beast in the rodeo arena at Aileron over the Easter weekend.

The roughstock had the upper hand as riders were thrown off then stitched up, safety clowns were ground into the dirt and a judge tossed into the air, and needed to be replaced after an unexpected encounter.

Anything can happen in eight seconds and the crowd packed into the stands saw it all close up.

LIFE CHOICE: The moment young rider, Ozzie Lewis realises taking on an Aileron bull was not the wisest decision.

OUCH: A safety clown goes to ground as an angry bull asserts its authority.

BRUTAL: A rider has a heavy landing as the beast wins the battle. (Phil Williams: 545198)

EDUCATION: A rider protects himself as he is taught a lesson by an Aileron bull.

FENCED: Jack Buckman is thrown into the fence to end his Station Buck jump ride.

HELP: Carson Cook is assisted to the medical tent for some treatment.

TANGLED: Carson Cook is caught up in the gear as his ride comes to an abrupt end.

UNGAINGLY: Carson Cook has an ugly dismount in the Open Bullride.

FORCED LANDING: A rider braces himself for a hard landing

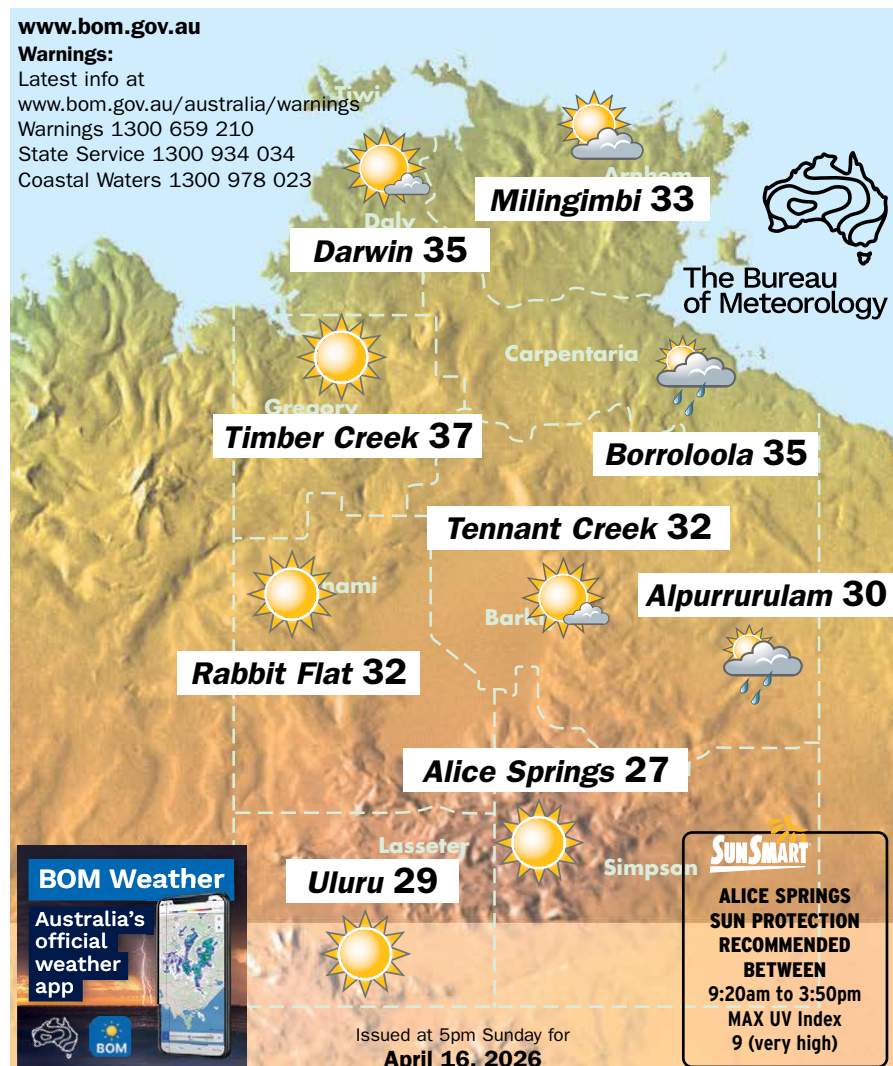

WILD: A bronco gives a rider a wild ride.

be a highly competitive race, making it a highlight on Day two of the Alice Springs Turf Carnival, which also incorporates the PFD Foods Fillies and Mares Luncheon, making it a race day not to be missed.

ALICE SPRINGS FORECAST

A slight to medium chance of showers and storms over the Arnhem, Carpentaria and Barkly Districts, increasing to a high chance in the far eastern Carpentaria and far eastern Barkly Districts. Sunny elsewhere. Light to moderate southeasterly winds, fresh and gusty in the Barkly District during the morning.

Aileron action

RIDERS were in fine form as Aileron hosted a series of events across its annual Bush Weekend.

From thrills and spills in the motorkhana to the spellbinding skills in the gymkhana and the jaw dropping feats at the rodeo, the event drew awe-inspired crowds

Riders of all ages competed in various events, with the younger ones receiving assistance to navigate challenges such as bending and flag racing at the gymkhana while battling for the chance to take home some prize money.
